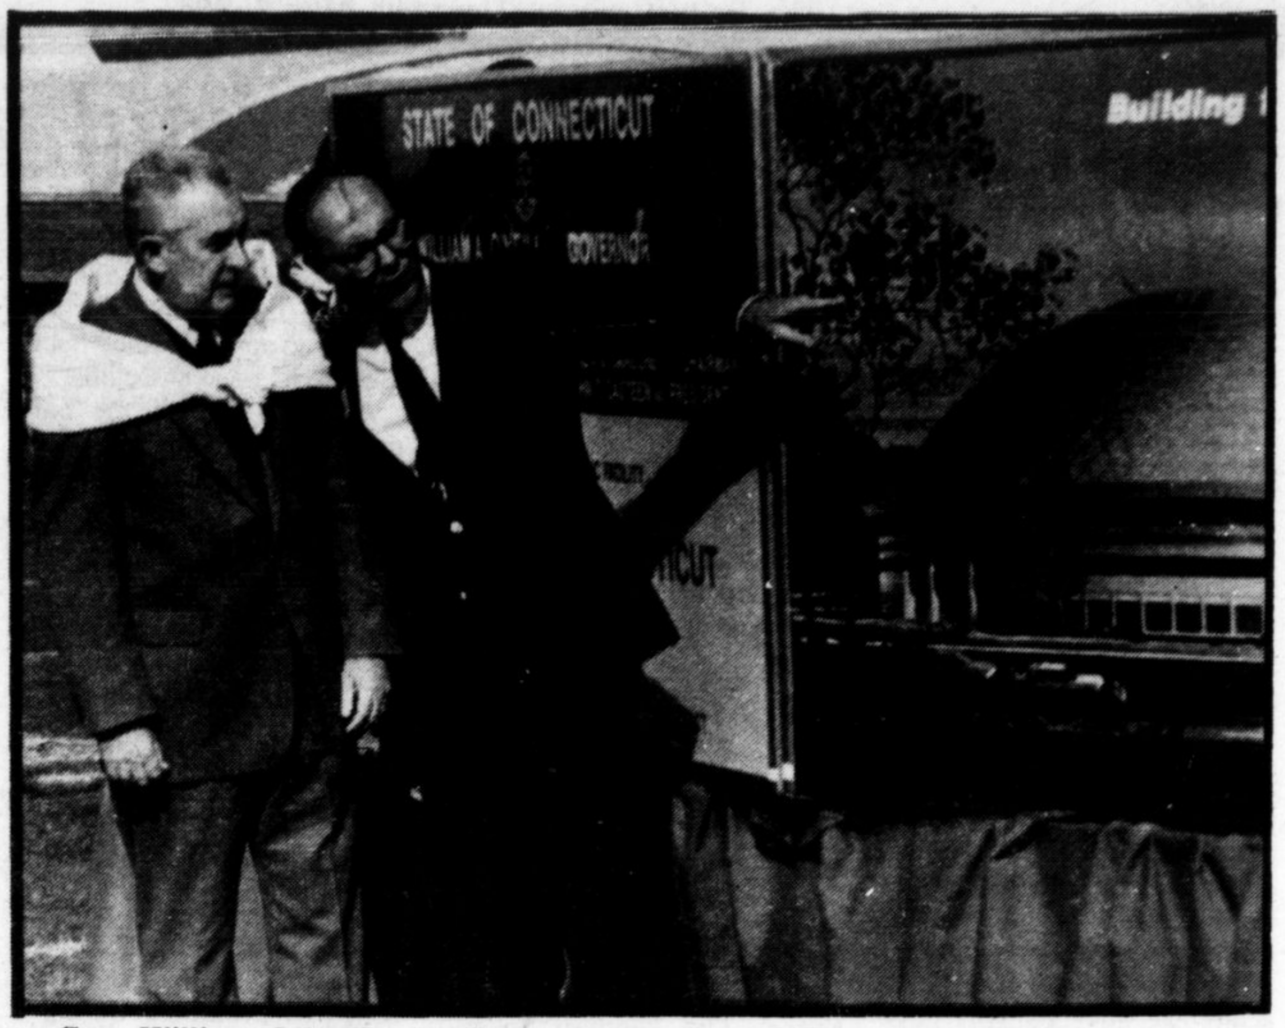
The Year in Review



Gov. William O'Neill and UConn President John T. Casteen III discuss plans for the Sports Center at the site's dedication this past October (file photo).

Building for the future — both physical construction and changes in the university administration — marked the 1986-87 school year at UConn.

Three construction projects drawing the most attention were the $120 million Connecticut Technology Park; the "Dream Campus" — a $360 million, 13-year plan to reconstruct campus, and the sports center — a new venue for the basketball team which has been discussed for at least 16 years.

ConnTech ran into snags during the summer when the Mansfield Planning and Zoning Commission rejected a plan for the first phase of building — the 64-unit graduate student housing complex called Celeron Square. Commissioners faulted ConnTech developers for being unprepared and asked them to resubmit the plans.

In the fall, Celeron plans were accepted for consideration by one vote and several months of controversy began. Residents on Hunting Lodge Road, which the project would front on, protested the project on two grounds — traffic and contamination.

The university's chemical pits, where chemicals were disposed until the late '70s, were suspected of contaminating wells of residents along Hunting Lodge Road. The university vowed — and has since completed — removal of the chemical pits and agreed to provide the residents with piped-in university water. On Feb. 23, the zoning commission approved Celeron, paving the way for a project which both proponents and detractors say will change the face of eastern Connecticut.

The "Dream Campus" plan had a much easier life than ConnTech. It passed the Board of Trustees — it's only test — on the first vote. The plan calls for the demolition of about 20 buildings, the construction of about 20 new buildings and parking lots and garages and the rerouting or elimination of several of the major roads through the center of campus. Only a guideline and not a dictate of exactly what will be built where, the "Dream Campus" focuses mainly on the center of campus and proposes nothing about dorms.

In late October imaginary progress was made on the proposed sports center. Gov. William O'Neill, President John Casteen, the university trustees and a crowd of alumni gathered for a "site dedication ceremony." The main feature of the ceremony was the hanging of two signs showing a photo of the proposed facility.

Less than two weeks after the dedication ceremony, someone stole one of the two signs — the slightest of the troubles the center was to face during the winter. Soon afterward, it was announced that experts underestimated the cost of building the facility. It would now cost $21 million instead of $16 million. University officials turned to the state legislature in Hartford for the extra $5 million. After threatening to cancel the project altogether, the General Assembly approved the extra money, sternly warning the university it was the last money the legislature would give to the project. In the spring, Casteen announced that Harry Gampel, a university alumnus, had donated $1 million for the project. In exchange, the main arena in the complex would be named Gampel Pavilion in honor of Gampel's parents.

Another project benefitting from a major donor nears completion this spring. The exterior of the addition to the Engineering II building — made possible by a donation from United Technologies Corporation — occupies the space between the Math Science Building and Engineering II while interior work continues.

Drawing more criticism than Celeron Square, state officials announced intentions to build a prison near the Mansfield Training School and take over several buildings at the school to house inmates. The plan drew fire from university, town and ConnTech officials who said a prison would be incompatible with the training school, university, research park and local communities. The training school is slowly being emptied under a court order to mainstream the residents of the school.

Also phased out, much more quickly, was College Theatre. In spring 1986 the theater closed its doors for good and the property was sold. Mike Taylor, the new owner, could find only an X-rated theater to occupy the space and, instead, decided to used the structure as the hub of a small shopping center called Storrs Commons. Throughout the school year, the old structure was torn down and the skeleton of the new structure went up. Scheduled to open in time for the 1987-88 school year, the plaza is scheduled to contain a convenience store, a Chinese restaurant, a video and electronics store and several offices.

Next door to Storrs Commons, the university-owned business block underwent a facelift. A new sidewalk adjacent to the storefronts and a wooden awning were built and the parking lot was repaved.

The business block wasn't the only parking lot to undergo change. At the Thumpers-Naachos-Twisters — TNT — restaurant and nightclub complex near Four Corners, the Mansfield Planning and Zoning Commission order the lot be expanded. TNT also started a shuttle bus service to campus to cut down on the number of students driving between school and the bars.

On the Mansfield-Willimantic border, the Eastbrook Mall expanded, adding a new wing which opened in the fall. In nearby Ashford, actor Paul Newman announced the construction of a camp for terminally ill children.

Back on campus, the university sustained eight resignations. John L. Toner, director of athletics, resigned under fire and accepted a post directing construction of the sports complex.

During the first month of school, seven-year Undergraduate Student Government adviser Allan Driscoll was forced to resign. Driscoll, who was paid about $20,000 a year by the student government, will be replaced by a university-paid adviser.

Another adviser in the Student Union, Artie Travis, adviser to the Black Students Association and coordinator of the Afro-American Cultural Center, announced resignation effective May 3 to take a job at another university.

...UConn's 1986-87 school year in review

Harry Hartley, vice president for finance and administration, resigned for the second time. Hartley had been vice president and returned to teaching once before. He will be a professor in the School of Business Administration teaching graduate courses in public finance.

At the Stamford campus, director Yakira Frank stepped down effective in August.

Two deans, Ronald J. Patten, dean of business, and Hugo H. John, dean of agriculture, announced their intentions to return to teaching.

In September, Casteen appointed Galvin G. Gall, who had retired as dean of continuing and extended education, to be the president's senior executive assistant. Less than six months later Gall resigned to return to retirement.

Dolores Hentschel, who filled Gall's spot in continuing and extended education, was one of several new faces at the university.

Geoffrey Johnson, who had been a student government representative replaced Tom Walsh as one of two student-elected members of the Board of Trustees when Walsh's term expired in November.

Also joining the board was Torrington Republican Stephen Altschuler, whom Gov. O'Neill appointed to fill a vacancy which had existed 18 months.

Joy O'Shields came to the university from Georgia to head UConn's new Counseling Program for Intercollegiate Athletics.

Carol Wiggins, vice president for student affairs and services, appointed several committees during the year — among them a study of the Associated Student Commissaries, a study of drug abuse on campus and a study of weekend life here.

While the university community said goodbye to eight people who resigned, we also bid a sad farewell to eight from among us who died.

In September, Scott M. Russell, 20, president of Triangle fraternity, and Pierce E. Healey, 22, past treasurer and an alumnus of Triangle, died when the car driven by Robert Benson struck a tree off South Eagleville Road on Sept. 26. Benson, also a brother at Triangle, sustained minor injuries and later received a three-month suspended sentence in the deaths.

Computer science professor Taylor Booth, 53, died Oct. 20. He had been instrumental in the development of UConn's computer science program.

Bruce McKibben Johnson, 53, a statistics professor, died Nov. 4.

Jack Lamb, 65, a retired communication science professor, died Feb. 9.

Weston Ashmore Bousfield, 83, former head of the psychology department, died Sept. 6.

Robert E. Kennedy, 63, retired track and cross country coach died Oct. 29.

Kennedy's death wasn't the only bad news for the UConn sports world. After the fall semester basketball players Cliff Robinson and Phil Gamble were kicked off the team because of bad grades. The basketball team under first-year coach Jim Calhoun finished 9-19 and a program which had sagged the year before seemed almost dead.

However, the spring recruiting season offered hope. Calhoun recruited 7-footer Marc Suhr, 6-foot-7 Murray Williams, 6-foot-6 Lyman DePriest, 6-foot-3 Willie McCloud and 6-foot John Gwynn. Basketball promises to be back in Storrs.

Another team which had been perennially disappointing turned in its best season in years. The football team, which beat Yale for the fourth straight year and finished 8-3 overall, tied for the Yankee Conference title and, going into a must-win game against UMass, had a shot at a National Collegiate Athletic Association Division IAA playoff berth. The team came through in dramatic fashion, beating UMass 20-17 on a touchdown with 28 seconds left, but was disappointed not to be included in the 16-team tournament field.

Also not making post-season play was the men's soccer team. In each NCAA tournament since 1977, the 12-7-2 Huskies lost out to Boston University, Harvard and Yale for one of the three tournament spots from New England.

Just as soccer finished second in its division of the Big East conference, the baseball team wrapped up its season in second place, aided by a strong pitching staff which was questionable at the beginning of the season. The one black mark on the season was a game against the University of Hartford which was suspended after two bench-clearing brawls. The team awaits the Big East tournament next week.

The defending national champion field hockey team was knocked out of the NCAA tournament in the second round with a 2-1 loss to the University of New Hampshire.

One team which may never have another winning season is gymnastics. After more than a year of doubtful existence, the team was canceled this week by Casteen. Casteen made this decision — contrary to a report from his Advisory Committee on Athletics which formed in the fall — because the university can't afford the $75,000-a-year program.

On the professional sports scene, 1986 proved an exciting year for baseball fans, pitting two local favorites — the New York Mets and the Boston Red Sox — against each other in the World Series. The words "Bill Buckner" replaced "Bucky Dent" on the Boston blacklist as the Sox lost the Series after being one strike away from winning it all with a two run lead in the ninth inning of game six. The Mets went on to win the Series in seven games.

While the Mets finished No. 1, UConn came in No. 6 — in Playboy magazine's survey of Top 40 party schools. As a result, Playboy photographer David Chan visited campus this spring searching for models to appear in the "Back-to-School" issue in October.

Playboy wasn't the only national medium to have UConn at the top of its list. MTV, the cable music video channel, chose UConn's Spring Weekend, including bands Cheap Trick and Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, for a special on spring weekends across the country to be broadcast June 5 through 7.

While UConn is the No. 6 party school in the nation, AIDS — Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — has put a damper on many people's party attitude across the country. Here at UConn, safe sex was promoted during a week highlighted by UConndom day, when 432 free condoms were distributed to students.

Another damper on the party was this year's prom. Redubbed the "Spring Cotillion," the prom was held on-campus for the first time.

The prom changed this year, but things were pretty normal in the world of the police department. Several arrests made the page-one headlines, including that of Daniel Cappa Spineti, a Resident Assistant charged with slashing a student with a knife for making too much noise.

Jose A. Roman, a UConn police officer was charged with looting dorm rooms for jewelry and was suspended from the force.

Two students, Glenn Victor White and Michele Y. Parsell, were each suspended for four years in connection with a vandalism spree involving the spreading of human excrement on walls and causing more than $10,000 in damages in 20 separate incidents.

Cromwell C. Rawls, owner of the Dairy Mart on the north end of campus, was charged with slugging a student who refused an order which was delivered to a dorm room.

On the happier side of police news, the police department, in conjunction with Alpha Phi Omega fraternity and a state beer distributor, started a Safe Ride program, offering alternate transportation to students too drunk to drive.

The university started taking steps to make it harder for people to park illegally on campus. A $30 fine and loss of parking privileges were two proposed solutions to the parking problem.

Another heinous crime — feeding the ducks at Mirror Lake — was the target of legislation as the General Assembly took up a bill to make feeding the ducks a crime punishable by a $99 fine.

UConn emergency services responded to three calls which made the news — all three involving injuries from falls. Lawrence T. McElhinney Jr., a student, recovered from critical injuries he sustained in a fall from his fourth-floor Rogers dorm room.

Russell Waesche, 24, of Ashford was injured in a fall down the stairwell from the first floor of the library. A couple of months later, Scott Skinner, 24, of Groton was in stable condition after falling down the stairwell from the third floor.

No one was seriously injured when the car driven by senior Gregory John Konan careened off the road and demolished the information booth on the south end of campus.

On the north end of campus, the interior of St. Mark's Episcopal Chapel was heavily damaged by a vandal. Edward Walter of Mansfield confessed to damaging windows, doors, the altar, the organ, a piano, some candlesticks, book stands and furniture in the chapel.

Fire damage to Storrs Congregational Church was insignificant by comparison. Workmen renovating the church accidentally ignited paint in the interior of one of the hollow wooden columns on the front of the church. Damage was limited to parts of the column.

Big issues in the student government this year included funding for the student credit union, a Nuclear Weapons Free Zone proposal, a student government fee increase, a revised USG constitution and a two-day extension to the study period before final exams.

The student government turned down a $6,000 request from the credit union after having given $40,000 in the past. Management at the credit union predicted doom for student services if the money was denied. The union is still open.

Late in the spring the government gutted a proposal which would have declared UConn a Nuclear Free Zone. The original proposal, which included a blanket ban on nuclear weapons and nuclear weapons research at the university and a request that the university divest holdings in companies which produce nuclear weapons, was scrapped in favor of requesting the University Senate to establish a Center for Peace Studies. The center was part of the original proposal. A crowd of about 200 pro-free zone students was disappointed by the student government's overwhelming rejection of the plan.

The student government voted down a fee increase for itself, not wanting to be a three time loser in student referenda which must approve a fee increase before it can go through.

The student government did pass two questions for referendum, though. A revised constitution, work on which began in the fall, was put on the April ballot along with a question asking students if they wanted two extra days to study at the end of the semester. Both questions passed easily; the constitution 1344-224, the study days 1541-304.

Candidate and voter turnout in the student government elections hit a three-year low as 12 percent of the students cast ballots for 32 candidates, many of the candidates running uncontested. President Kraig St. Pierre was the second-highest vote getter, behind Comptroller Ross Garber, and was re-elected president at a Student Assembly meeting later in the month.

The student government's two blemishes on the year both dealt with publications. The government was wrought with problems from the 1985-86 yearbook staff which failed to deliver a book on time. The government struggled to get the book out several months late while the 1986-87 yearbook staff disassociated itself from the previous staff.

USG's ventures into monthly magazine publishing ended after one issue of Cover magazine appeared in the fall and was never seen again.

George Spadoro thought he would never be seen again. Spadoro was vice president of the student government in 1969-70, when he borrowed $1,000 from the government. He forgot to pay $250 of it back. The Daily Campus tracked Spadoro down as part of a series to find the eight people who didn't pay up. Spadoro promised to pay.

In non-USG politics, a group of Resident Assistants demonstrated against the Department of Residential Life for better working conditions and more pay.

The university's affirmative action program was faulted as not being effective by the state Commission on Human Rights and Opportunities. Casteen immediately appointed a special committee to examine the problem and ensure compliance with state regulations.

In November, Democrats seized the day as Democrats Gov. William O'Neill and U.S. Sen. Christopher Dodd won re-election and the Democrats retook both houses of the state legislature.

In national politics, a scheme to trade weapons for hostages in Iran and send money from the deal to Contra rebels in Nicaragua plagued the Reagan administration.

On campus, former President Gerald Ford opened a series of visits by luminaries which included stops by economist John Kenneth Galbraith, space shuttle astronaut and UConn grad Franklin Chang-Diaz, Boston Celtics basketball coach Red Auerbach, talk show host Oprah Winfrey, singer Mary Travers and Nobel laureate Linus Pauling.

People who didn't visit the campus this year included the CIA, which canceled interviews on campus for the first time in 16 years. While the CIA said it just wasn't interested in UConn students, many attributed the no-show to a protest of the recruiting which had been planned.

1986 was the year that the Mister and Miss Black UConn Pageant had its first white contestant — Rosemarie Ballek. Ballek was unsuccessful in her bid and bitter over media coverage of her attempt.

A page one plea for a new home for UConn fire dog Freckles II, who sat on death row, had a happy ending as the dalmatian was adopted the next day.

In April the university observed its fourth-ever

Resident-backed lawsuit shows will to fight PZC

By Dean Orser
Daily Campus Staff

As he stood in his front yard two weeks ago, David Zeni placed his hands on his hips and surveyed the site where two housing developments were being built off Hunting Lodge Road. He stared at the passing cars and wiped the sweat from his forehead; then he said with a smirk, "somebody has to do it."

On April 15, Zeni and the14-member Hunting Lodge Road Area Association filed a lawsuit against the Mansfield Planning and Zoning Commission for its approval last November of Holinko Estates, the town's housing development.

The association, of which Zeni is president, took this action because they fear traffic will increase on Hunting Lodge Road as a result of the multi-family housing. They also fear the possibility of groundwater contamination— something many residents on Hunting Lodge Road have lived with for years because of their proximity to UConn's landfill and former chemical pits.

But in late February, the PZC doubled the association's concerns by approving a zone change for Connecticut Technology Park's Celeron Square, a graduate-student housing complex to be built next to Holinko.

It is unclear why the PZC is only being sued for its decision on Holinko Estates and not Celeron Square. Zeni is reluctant to talk about it. But the fact that he and the Hunting Lodge group are going through with the lawsuit shows they are not ready to give up—not yet.

"It's always difficult to overturn a PZC's decision," said Joann Paul, the attorney for the Hunting Lodge Association.

Paul said a hearing date has yet to be set, because the Mansfield zoning commission has yet to file a brief with Rockville Superior Court.

The Daily Campus has obtained a copy of the Hunting Lodge Road Association's brief. Its argument states that "The commission's action in approving the proposed zone change was illegal, arbitrary and in abuse of its discretion in that the record before the commission does not contain facts sufficient to justify its decision, nor is the decision reasonably supported by the evidence presented at the hearing."

A majority of commissioners said they were satisfied with evidence presented throughout the hearings and believed it supported their decisions.

"I'm not sure why they're suing Holinko and not Celeron Square," said commissioner William Hudock. "I'm not sure what their motivations are.

"They can slow down the housing authority project. I'm not saying they'll be able to stop it, but in the court they can slow it down."

Throughout its deliberations, the commission heard evidence from traffic consultants who had monitored Hunting Lodge Road, and from environmental consultants who studied the flow of contaminants from the chemical pits and landfill.

"I think that our major concern is the traffic. The court is going to have to decide whether there was sufficient evidence at the hearings (PZC)," Paul said.

Based on traffic reports taken in late March and early April of 1986, Stephen F. Mitchell, a representative from Fuss and O'Neill Inc., told the PZC that Hunting Lodge Road maintained a level of C service, meaning a moderate amount of traffic at its intersections.

"The difficulty is that those standards are used for highways, and that's what we had discussions about," Hudock said.

The lawsuit charges that there was no analysis performed to determine the impact of the proposed development on pedestrian traffic.

The PZC placed 14 conditions on the Holinko and Celeron developments. One of those conditions calls for the construction of a pedestrian path from Celeron Square to UConn. According to Hudock, the path should eventually extend to Holinko Estates.

The lawsuit also cites eight accidents which occured on Hunting Lodge Road between 1984 and 1985, and contradicts Mitchell's traffic report with one from another counsulting firm.

In light of the traffic controversy, Hudock said many of the commissioners determined that Hunting Lodge Road is a shortcut used by people who enter Mansfield via Rte. 44.

At last Monday's meeting, the PZC approved a regulation change that eventually could allow ConnTech developers to build a road from Rte. 44 to North Eagleville Road. Hudock said he and others believed this would alleviate some traffic traveling on Hunting Lodge Road.

On the contamination issue, three of the PZC's other conditions stipulate that no maps or permits may be signed until the chemical pits are removed and provide for future groundwater and soil monitoring.

"I think that the conditions that were put through for Holinko are sufficient safeguards for the community," Hudock said. "I was very concerned about that."

UConn's chemical pits were removed last month. From 1964 to 1966, hundreds of gallons of labaratory chemicals were dumped there.

Benzene, a known carcinogen, was detected in the groundwater of at least four homeowners on Hunting Lodge Road. No tests have ever determined a positive link between the chemical pits and the contamination.

According to Hudock, the chemical pits are a "non-issue at this point."

"Contamination may occur but if it does it will be identified," Hudock said.

In accordance with recommendations from the state Department of Environmental Protection, UConn installed a water line on Hunting Lodge Road last fall. Both residents and the housing developments will use university water. For the residents who have endured four years of possible well-water contamination, UConn will provide the water free of charge.

Paul said the members of the association are "still concerned about groundwater contamination," even though the chemical pits are removed. In their brief it is stated that the construction of the housing developments could alter the existing underground flow of contaminants, and that this could be hazardous to homeowners.

"Know When to Say When"

Toner looks to the future, both his and UConn's

By Jim Acton
Daily Campus Staff

John Toner has never been one to sit and watch the world pass by. Although the search for his replacement as UConn's athletic director is entering its final weeks, he refuses to relax and count the days until the end.

On June 30, Toner will relinquish the position he has held since July of 1969. He will then assume duties as manager of the construction of the proposed sports center.

Instead of leaving unfinished business, Toner is doing all he can to make the transition as smooth as possible for his successor.

"Things are busy, and I intend for it to be that way right through June 30," Toner said. "We are going to complete the year, compile the annual report and attend the year-end conferences which begin next week."

"I want to turn the place over in good shape," he added.

Toner, the former president of the National Collegiate Athletics Association, has not allowed the athletic department to slip into the limbo which is often a result of the search for a new department head and ensuing transition period. Rather, the athletic department is thriving.

The halls of the field house are currently being painted blue and white, replacing the colors which made portions of the field house resemble a dungeon. Also, a lounge is being constructed in the rear of the building which will be used for basketball recruiting.

However, the true test for Toner will come Wednesday. And a passing grade on this test may solidify Toner's place in UConn's athletic history.

Wednesday is the day when bidding on the proposed field house is open to general contractors. UConn has been given a budget of just over $21 million and the bids must be lower than that figure for construction to begin.

"We're all hoping that the construction bids will be within our limits," Toner said. "Wednesday is a critical day for this project."

Toner and Harry Hartley, vice president for finance and administration, will be at the Bureau of Public Works in Hartford to monitor the bidding. Toner said there will be many anxious moments until a desirable bid is received.

"If the [bid] exceeds our budget, it's back to the drawing board," Toner said.

But Toner doesn't want to think negatively. Instead, he only thinks of the bright future.

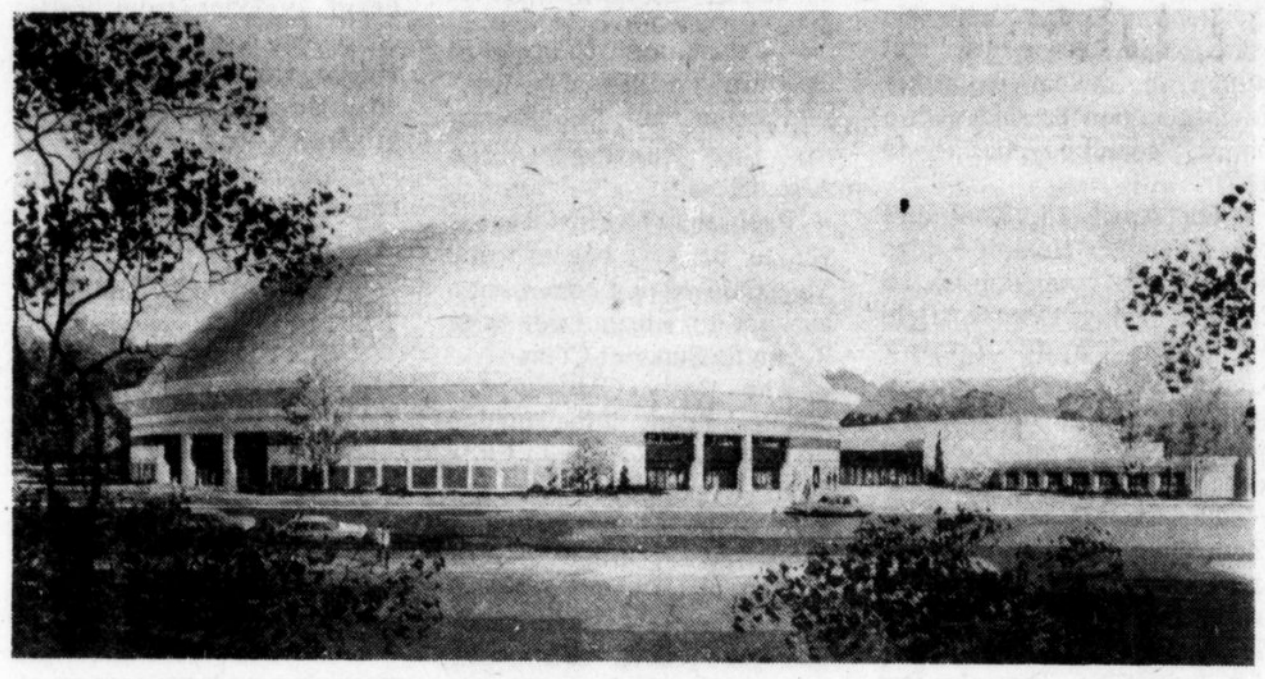
"If everything goes as planned, groundbreaking will take place in early summer," Toner said. "By the time the students get back [in September], there should be a big hole in the ground."

Toner said the entire project should take 30 months. He projects late spring of 1990 as a completion date, barring any unforeseen building delays.

"But if everything goes well, we could be done before that," Toner added.

A completed sports center would be the final icing on Toner's 21-plus years of service to UConn. The school is entering a critical stage in its athletic history, and decisions made over the next few months could determine the outcome of UConn athletics.

Toner realizes this, and he is not about to fade into the night and leave the athletic department hanging. The university means too much to him for that to happen.



The proposed field house is still an artist's sketch. However, if things go according to plans, construction could begin as soon as early summer, according to John Toner, UConn's athletic director.

The rest of the team, whose names and not here, don't be offended, I'll buy you a beer.
Hauntingly true cliches start to fly
We all sound alike as the months go by.
So many memories, some good and some bad, never forget all the great times we had.
Good luck to those who graduate in May, continue the friendships day after day.
Love always,
"Monster"

Watson: The Watson Beach Council would like to thank everyone for making this semester so fantastic. Thanks again to all the people who helped and participated in the wedding, everyone did a fantastic job. Good luck and congratulations to all the graduating seniors, Dave, good luck at Belden, you were a great H.R. and advisor.Everyone have a great summer and get psyched for a great year to come.

Edisio (Watson 5th): Congrats on graduating and with Medical School. It's been a great four years being roommates. I don't know who was more crazy you or me. Have a great time in Europe. Dave

Jim- I guess the time I've been dreading has finally arrived. I'll never forget everything you've done for me, and all the special times we've shared. Thank you for always being there to listen to me, when I needed to talk; to hold me, when I needed to cry; and laugh with me, when I was being silly. Thank you for being my very best friend and so much more. I Love You.- Lori

Laurie, What can I say. Congratulations and Good Luck. These last three years have been great! And the last one was the best! You're a fantastic roommate and I will miss you a lot!! I'll never forget all those late night talks (if we could only see the future) and you're advise. Thanks for always being there when I needed you. Let's not let the distance come between what a great friendship we have. You're the best!! Love You Lots! Kate

Hey Lukie!! Congratulations, you finally did it! It only took 5 years, but whose counting! (ha, ha). Love, Lise

Elaine: It is with both great pleasure and sorrow that I wish you congratulations on your graduation. For although I am happy for you and wish you all the luck in the world, it pains me to see you go. All the best. Love, Ennio

BROCK 3RD: It's been fun Deb with a capital "E". From Dominos and Happy Hour to Nassau and champagne. Luke the Detective in the St. Valentine's Day deffacation. What?! Sherry- want another Rum and Coke?! I never at Marguaritaville- have you Deb and Kath. Keith- Dancin' like only a white man can. Luz- keep buggin' Rick, Joan, Jerry, and "The Old Sousa Gang". Thanks for the memories. Lisa: Keep smiling! Suz: Couldn't have asked for a better roommate or a better friend. Remember "WE'RE NOT GONNA DRINK TONIGHT!" It's been an experience- Sue

Brock 3rd: Here's to dancing on tables (Did I do that?), to flying kuhh-balls, floor showers, and suplexes! Sue, is this becoming a habit? We're going to have fun with a capital F-U-N, and Oh Domino! Suz, Oh my God I think I'm gonna faint! Thanks for saving me! Sherry, are you locked out again?! Deb and Kathy, remember when we entertained Margaritta Ville?! Luke, you deserve R.A. of the year for performance beyond the call of DUTY. Keith, keep on dancing like only you know how! Barto, never forget what eight is for! Who loves you baby? To the rest of the gang, I'll never forget all the good times, good friends, and great laughs! Beware, I ain't done yet! I still have another senior year to survive!! I'll miss you all! Love,Debbie

WENDY- THE ILL PERSON. WE'LL MISS OUR HOWDY DOODY TIMES, MAD POETRY QUOTING, HUSKY PARKING LOT DANCING, MIRROR HAIR DANCING, POPPY SEED CREAMERS, SPIDER FAMILY, WOODY THE FINCH, MOOD FOR FOOD, VACUUM CLEANER OF HORRORS, BLACKING OUT FROM ILLNESS, AND ALL YOUR CRAZY THINGS. BUT MOST OF ALL, I'LL MISS THOSE PEOPLE WHO TRASH OUR ROOM FOR THEIR FIENDSHIP IS SO SPECIAL! CONGRATS! WE LOVE YOU MEL, MA, L, TRACY

REBECCA, (music major), I will miss you IMMENSELY next year!! Can we stuff me in your suitcase so I can be with you? Enjoy France, enjoy life, BUT don't forget about us; I won't. Love, Jon

Barone- You geek! Good luck at Southern next year. I will miss Sale of the Century, Zeppelin, your stereos, and your shaving cream. Let's have a reunion at Skiddres or Que Pasa. Love always, Jon Gooners, Pauline, Joanne, Laurie, Malt,and Larry, Congratulations and Good Luck! You guys are the best. I will miss you!! Let's celebrate and always keep in touch!! Love, Kate P.S. Tricia, Mary, Laurie, and Bob, we're on the home strech. Have a great summer and get psyched to PARTY!!

JOE, EDISIO, AND BILL: The 3 "pre-protessionals". Good luck in Med, Dental, and Law School. Luv, Lisa (the only Ph.D. candidate!)

JEN! YES YOU, THE SATAN WORSHIPER! I guess this is it for you chicklet! Here's to our wild and crazy times together! (Go on, hold up your beer... I don't care if you're eating breakfast!) You're a great friend and part time head-shrinker and I hope I've returned the favor. You know you deserve the best! Good luck in your incredibly bright future. Isn't that special??! Love, Jode

GREG & TONY: Mere words connot express the magnitude of loss we will feel when you leave us... (sigh). Seriously, you guys are the best and we will miss you so much! It's been fun knowing you! Love, Deb and Jode

JEN, King Vitamin says congratulations! Don't forget to pull that "all nighter" for ESIM or you might not graduate! Anyway, I'm gonna miss ya lots Jen! Love ya! Doobage

"Sister Sue": I'm really going to miss having you up here. Thanks for always being here. You are the best! I Luv Ya! Love, Kathy

Joe (Eddy 6th): This year was difficult for me but your love and guidance pulled me through. I will always be here for you. Good luck in achieving your dreams. I hope we'll always stay as close as we've gotton this year. Love, your little sister, Michele

Peter (R.A. Eddy) What we've had these past 4 years has been very special to me. You'll always be in my heart no matter how far apart we may be. Love, Lisa

SUE, Wild women and hermit. Thanks to Pina, we're roommates. Hilltop- the year for weird people. Coffee and a cigarrette with "One Day at a Time". The racoon that lost his tail. Hurricane Gloria. The floormates and the social life, need I say more?! Alumni-Dynasty parties. Tradition of cake throwing. Bahamas: Booze Cruize, our balcony. Spring Weekend. Graduation will only add to all the good times. Thanx for the best semester ever! Luv, Suz

Mike and Rob: Sorry our superior hoop skills caused your defeat. Next time pick a game you can win. Don't forget about our case. No cheap stuff. The Tenderonies

Edisio (Watson 5th): Congrats on graduating. It's too bad we didn't get to know you sooner. You'rer a great person! Good luck in Med School! Hope to see you around. The Gang

To the Ted's Duo (Watson 6th): Congrats on graduating! Ted's won't be the same without you! We'll all miss you a lot! You'd better visit! Take care and good luck! We love you! The Gang

Patty- Thanks for putting up with my "call-ins" after deadline. Good Luck in the job hunt! Love, Nancy

To Eddy 5th:
Here we reside, all thirty five plus eight,
convinced of the fact our floor was top rate.
Aah not true, we have several snags
A couple of bi---es and some bags.
No one is sacred, all secrets are told, regardless, embarassment, how hot or cold.
Mini-court, fast pitch, and lots of hardball, not an ump in sight to make the close call.
Let's start in the triple, a secret quad,
and run down the list of our starting squad.
Greg is "so special" hardly ever gets mad brought home from practice the saying "my bad".
"Got a room on campus?" is what Tim's yelling
Only so he can continue nude gelling.
Scott's a blast, a definite trip
He got a woman attached at the hip.
Rocco thinks he's such a nice guy,
Good Luck in the future. Adios, Good-bye.
Now we move on, for you can see why,
it's not fit for any man or beast alive.

Janice M: Where have the past 4 years gone? We have had some really great times here: From the "Nunhood" to "video rentals" and especially California! You are the greatest roommate anyone could ever ask for. Thanks for always being there to listen. You are truly my best friend! Love, Linda

Jim, Hey babe. We finally made it! GRADUATION- FREEDOM. I think we're going to make it. I LOVE YOU SO MUCH!! Here's to you and me. HAPPY GRADUATION. Love, Lori

Karen, Thanks for being a super roommate. I'll never forget all the notes all over the place including the bathroom or your weird dreams at night. Thanks for all the advice and for listening to me tell you all those things I did that I wish I didn't do. Good luck in everything. By the way, when is Jimmy going to give you the ring, anyway? Love, Linda

To THOSE LEAVING EDDY 4TH: DARCY and LAURIE: We'll miss having you, we'll see you around but hopefully not in the E.R. SANDY, BRYAN, and STEPHANIE: We better be invited to all those Carraige House parties. EVA, DARIA, CATHY, PETE, JEFF, ALICIA, and SHELLY: BEST OF LUCK TO ALL OF YOU! KAREN: Good luck with your car and Jimmy and sorry for always waking you up. DAVE: We'll miss having a resident Ninja. SCOTT: Can't say we'll miss the obnoxious practical jokes, but we'll definetly miss you. JIM: (Mr. Gumby himself) Hope you get that feature on the front page of the N.Y.Times. PHIL: Don't be diving anymore (Herpes). We'll miss you "Candy" man. FRANK: Grab your ankles. For your sake, let's hope every year is like this one for the Mets and Giants. TONY: It's about time you old man. Finally no more bouncing basketball! I'll miss you ___head! GREG: I'll miss your tongue in my ear. (Not really though) Good luck in Law School. NATALIE: What can I say? You've done so much for me between I.D.'s and borrowing butts. You're great! EDDY 4TH JUST WON'T BE THE SAME WITHOUT YOU GUYS! VISIT A LOT! Love, Ann

Sue O : HAPPY GRADUATION! you are a great friend! I'll never forget our many "chats" or our "exciting" 9:30 am lectures! GOOD LUCK in everything yu do and have a BLAST in EUROPE! Keep in touch. Love, Linda

Elaine, you GOON! We've had our ups and downs at UConn, haven't we? But all in all, it's been the best four years of my life. You've been the best friend and roommate anyone could have! Thank you so much for all the fun times and for caring even during the bad. Best of luck with all you do. Love and friendship always, Michele P.S. You'd better write me in Virginia. We made it! Don't ever forget all the long talks, friends we made, laughs we had, hyper fits, pranks, parties, weird evenings, and FUN!

Cheryl, Can you believe it, 4 years, best of friends kid, and here's to best of times past, present, and future. I can't even tell you what a great friend you've been. Remember, no matter how far apart, we're friends forever. You're the best. All those silly, sad, happy, angry, strange, stupid, and especially drunk times that we've shared-ever so special, aplaude, aplaude. Love, Lori

DEAREST RICH,
THANKS FOR BEING KIND, CARING, GENEROUS, UNDERSTANDING, LOVING AND MOST OF ALL FOR BEING YOU. YOU'RE THE BEST! LOVE, IDA

Enjoy the summer

ALUMNI

Lori K. (Eddy 3rd), I can't believe how one year has passed so quickly! You have been such a wonderful friend to me and I have had some of the best times of my life this past year. I really want us to keep in touch. The fun must continue (starting Memorial Weekend?) All the best, Jenny H

To the seniors of Eddy 3rd: Jim, Tommy, Cheryl K, Lori K, Liz, Paula, and Lisa. You guys have made the past year the best year ever! You have all been great friends! I'm really going to miss all of you a lot!! I wish you all the best and you'd better be back to visit. Love, Jenny H

Gretel, Gretel, Gretel, You are the best. I'll miss our little cluttered room. Best of luck and remember no more pig twisting in public. I'll always remember the great times we've had (oh yeah, even the one's with our long lost friends Amy and Cambo- ha- we love you too.) Love, Jennifer

Mary, Congratulations! You've been a great roomie- Thanks for three great years! Good luck!! Love, Kelly

Sue D, Brock: The past 3 years have been a very rewarding experience for both of us. I especially learned about comittment, loving, and sharing. You played a very important part in my life and always will. I have only one regret and you know what that is. Webster and I will miss you very much. Love always, Barry P.S. See you in the Cape this summer

Peter (R.A. Eddy): What we've had these past 4 years has been very special to me. You'll always be in my heart no matter how far apart we may be. Love, Lisa

TO EDDY 6TH PAST AND PRESENT – IT WAS REAL. BEST OF LUCK, GL.

Jeff (Brock 4th): What we had was special. When we were together, I was happier than I ever dreamed possible. Thank you for making the past two years happy ones. I will never forget the special moments we share together. Love always, Lule

RICH, SORRY THAT YOU WENT THROUGH A YEAR OF "HELL". EVEN THOUGH THE BAD TIMES MAY SEEM TO HAVE OUTWEIGHED THE GOOD PERHAPS IT WAS ALL WORTH IT. LOOKING FORWARD TO BETTER TIMES. LOVE, CB

To Satan, the Nude gellin' Man, Mac, Banana and all other Eddy 5th graduates – Congratulations and thanks for all the good times. But now you're all "though", so end it . Keep up the nice game and good luck in the future. J.L. and the Eddy 5th crew

To "My friend Beth": Thanks for all the great times and for just being there. I'm going to miss you. Enjoy the future and good luck always. Love, J. the fiend.

Paul, Happy graduation! I had a good time and I'll never forget you. Good luck with your MBA! I'li keep in touch...
Love, Lena

CATHY, You've been an excellent roommate! Stay in touch and live it up in Italy! LUV, ME II (Alicia)

Kathy (the girl in Eddy cafe) : Did I get your attention? Stay fun! Love, Alicia

EAST

Christine, Only two more days until Bono gets to meet YOU. Go easy on him O.K.? Brian P.S. B.T.'s for dinner?

Jilly, (aka P3): You're going to have to come back for footmallet polo in the arena, you know. Your honorary little sister, Moo, (aka P3)

Hey, HORKER - CATCHER NAMER, "Where the bleep is Flanders?" Just play me a samba - I'm your friend for life. Thank you for this year, I'm real glad we met. You're great in every way, and I love you. Good luck on finals, freshman. Love, your pie face.

HEY BABE, On Friday it will be SEVEN months that we've been "together." I know this has been really hard for you to adjust to, but I'm willing to wait as long as it takes until you're sure this is what you want. I love you very much! DON'T FORGET ME OVER THE SUMMER! LOVE YOU, Sugarpie Honeybutt.

To my silly little NEWT: You are such a fun person! The past six months, one week and one day have been the best. I'm looking forward to a wonderful summer with you! I Love You! Love, your silly little Newt.

STRETCH – Thanx for 2 of the best years of my life: Toronto, Florida (Edgar, Mickey, Burt Reynolds' lover, pier at night...) truck drivers, raodtrips slip and slide, long talks, movies od infinitum. Thanks for always being there through the good and the not so good. You are THE BEST!!! I love ya, Roomie! Love – me.

Mary-Sue (My Buckley Buddy): Best of luck in all that you do. Never forget...the laughter, the loves, the friends, the fights, the tears, the talks, the hopes, the hurt, the fears, the jealousy, the pressure...our friendship.
God Bless You!
Sharon

HAPPY BIRTHDAY MORON!! WANT SOME FRIED DOUGH? Harry! SMILE when you have a birthday! Hug?ohhh, Pretzel donut? Your favorite? Love You Moron!!! Your Moron.

LIZARD, THE YEAR HAS GONE BY SO FAST. WE'VE HAD OUR SHARE OF GOOD TIMES AND BAD TIMES. AND THROUGH IT ALL, OUR RELAIONSHIP HAS GROWN STRONGER WITH TIME. I'LL ALWAYS REMEMBER THE SPECIAL MOMENTS AND FUN TIMES: COOKIE STOCK; WALKING IN THE SNOW AT 4 A.M.; FALLING OUT OF BED; L.WONG; SKIING (MT. SNOW AND STRATTON); COOKIE DOUGH; WOOF, WOOF! WE MUST BE A COUPLE OF ––– MANIACS! S.O.-.-., S.O.-.-.! FOUR IN A ROW; SPRING BREAK; FORCE; FLOWERS FROM AN ADMIRER; OUR PICTURE; LOSING A POINT! RFTW – "LONG TIME COMING"; – TRIP QUARTERS; YOU SURPRISED ME; "I ---- YOU!" LET'S GO AROUND THE WORLD IN A DAY. (FOR ANOTHER YEAR). IT'S JUST THERE. LOVE ALWAYS, STING

To Kevin, Rich, Bob, L.J., Jane and all my friends in Grange: You guys are the best. Thanks for making this semester special. Love, Heidi

LARRY S. – (BUCKLEY): CONGRATULATIONS BRO! I'm glad you transferred to UCONN. although it wasn't always obvious, I really enjoyed having you at the same school. Glad we have grown so close and I'm happy to be able to call you my friend. I'll miss you, but Brown isn't that far away!
Love ya,
Kathy

Pauline, P, Pam – Congratulations! Out into the real world! I'm going to miss you at those crazy horse shows and always. Remember – Dairy Judging, horse shows and of course McD's breakfast. You will always be on my mind and in my heart – we are the world, we are the children, we are the one's who make a brighter day so let's start living! Good Luck Always! Friend forever – Love always – Jane though you've been filtered with moments of despair, you walk with head waltzing against a bright, blue sky. you move in constant rhythm like the softest song, spinning back into itself again and again. and you keep on smiling with full brown lips. I know I'll always remember you only because I care.

Best wishes today and always – with love, your friend.

Lisa, you've been the best roommate anyone could ask for. Thank you for everything! I'll miss you a lot! You better come up and visit. Best wishes with life after UConn. Love, Debbie
P.S. When are we going to have our first fight?

Dave, Lucy, Lucille, Lorraine, Evelyn, Belinda, Martha, Joan, Sophie, JoAnn, Mrs. V., Jackie, Mike – It's been great working with you. I'll miss you guys! Take care – Steve

Don-Don: We love you – We couldn't have done it without you – Thanks, Chooch loves you; Love T and J

To the unconventional man with the scars: What's the word for today? Specific! It's been unique: the rocking chair, macaroni and cheese, trying to draw horses, and typing. (Good help is tough to find!) My Charlie Brown trees are better than your Douglas firs! Practice putting this summer, and I'll work on my tan. (Ha-Ha) Love, peanut (alias Betty Crocker) P.S. Blow bubbles for me!

To the "Dizzy" Blonde – You say no one ever sends you personals, well here is one just for you. (So stop your nagging). I can't believe the past couple of weeks – they've been great. You have been a constant (but one I wouldn't trade for anything) distraction. I'm so glad I got to know you even though it was so late in the year. We both have big challenges to look forward to in the next few months. The only difference is that the people shooting at you will be using "Blanks". I probably won't see you on your birthday, so happy 20th a few days early. Good luck on finals even though you probably won't need it. Have a great summer, stop by next year or else. Take care,
Love "a friend".

Angry Andy, Happy Birthday to the hottest male in the world! Get psyched for the weekend and remember I'll always love ya! Love, Lynnie Lynn

Beth – Thank you for everything. You're some special friend! I'm glad you'll be here. Love, Steve P.S. I'll get the music soon, I promise.

SONJA –
WELL LITTLE SIS, ANOTHER FINE SEMESTER IS AT A CLOSE. MY MEMORIES WILL BE FILLED WITH SMILES AND LAUGHTER, ALL OF WHICH YOU WERE A PART. HAVE A HAPPY AND SAFE SUMMER – YOU'LL BE MISSED.
VINCE

James – You be illin'! Good luck always. That's weak! Give them hell. I'll miss your demented sense of "humor". Beware of fish. No glove no... – Steve P.S. Just remember it's Debi's fault! You are the greatest!

Hey Russian Wench –
This is the end, eh? May success follow you everywhere. Hopefully that will be further than the Whalers '86-87.

Jodi, I have had a really good time these past few months thanks to you. I hope you have a great time in the cape this summer as I will miss you. Love, Scott.

Terry – Good luck to you and Chris. You deserve the best. We'll miss you! Stop being ignoring and keep in touch! Love, E & N

Patty, HAPPY GRADUATION! You have been the BEST roommate and a GREAT friend. I hope the future brings you all you deserve. Love ya, Lynn
P.S. ALWAYS keep in touch.

Beth W., you made it. These have definitely been the best of times. I know I'll miss you. Good luck and congratulations. Love, Patrick

LINDA: Thanks for making this semester special and thanks, again, for being who you are. Glad some of the "nothings" became "somethings." LOVE, FROM ME.

To all seniors on the Equestrian team – Good luck after graduation in whatever you do and wherever you go! From, Joslyn

TO SUE B. IN BUCKLEY 4 NORTH – HERE'S TO BEING SUPER SENIORS. GOOD LUCK ON FINALS. YOU CAN'T STUDY FOR ALL OF THEM AT TED'S. LOVE, YOUR BIG BRO, MIKE.

Buckley 5N – The dorm terrors (and the floor curse) live on. Talk about easily corruptable! Even if we aren't as wild as last year, we've held on strongly to the floor rep. Special thanks to our subsidiary helpers on 4S, 6N and 2N. Setback, anyone? Alright, who wants to be a drunk fool tonight? We win. What's the magic word boys? – No doubt.
– Scam Metalhead

To Spleef and Dorky – Yes the battle might have been won by General A.E. Fellows last semester, but the anti-Trid regime will be finally put to an end next semester with the return of Tridmaster Spleef and the exile of General Fellows and Archenemy Gapway. Soon, yes very soon, Tridville will be restored and Buckley Hall will once again hear the familiar wails of The Trids (WAAAAA AAAAAAAA!) Here's to the AWESOME FOURSOME!
Love, Nos & Rov

TO FISH, JEANNE, STEPH, HOOLS, KIM, AMY, IGUANA, KRISTEN AND JEN: WHAT CAN WE SAY BUT – WE LOVE YOU! (isn't that special?!?)
– Lulu & Rov
P.S. There were these 3 pieces of string...

To the graduating brothers of Sigma Chi: Thanks for a great semester. Wish you were all going to be here longer. Good luck out there in the "REAL" world! We'll miss you!
Love – The "NEW" Little Sisters

THE LONELY GUY: Remember; it's not how long you wait, it's how long it is. And for you, it's going to be a long, long time.

Good Luck!

FRATS

Reimer and Jules, Isn't college just great? I love you guys even if I never visit you ! See you this summer. Perky

Top Gun & LN—Come bug me some more—just stay out of my room! And no fish sounds—Okay! Stay happy and have fun. Perky

To my bestest buddies in the whole world; Mary, Kate, Chris, Wendy, Carmela, Cheryl, Lori, and Donna. The past 3 semesters together have been the greatest. I'll always remember: Backrubs, sleeping in the lounge, all-nighters, 4 a.m. study breaks, (Just why is he seeing you Mary?),cheesepopcorn, illnesses—(Wendy, always remember. . . you don't have a HANGOVER do you ?) New Year's Eve, Riverside (I think it's raining guys), quarters in Donna's room, Kahlua and milk, "The Relay" that never happened, Boston, Chocoholics, Spaghetti dinners on Sunday, Birthday cakes, Goober!, Buzzpillows, "I'm not drunk, I'm just a little buzzed!", TRUTH OR TRUTH, Pilsbury Cookie Dough, Hugs!, Kate, is it that time of the year? And a million other things that I don't have room to write. You guys adopted me and became my friends when I needed it most. Now that we're all going our own ways, I hope we can all stay in touch, and add a few more things for next year's personal. Love, Brian

YNOT, Thanks for a funfilled year. I don't think I could of had better! You're special and I love ya, Laura

Paula—Another four years are over! We sure have had many great times. Good luck next year. I'll miss you! (but of course I'll visit) Love ya! Maura

Joanne: It's been an excellent three years, especially this past one being roommates. Always remember everything we've done together. Best of luck after graduation. Love always, Karen

To the hot red head Geology babe. Three semesters down and one to go! ! Thanks for being the best roommate and friend I could ask for. Have a fun summer. Love, Caren

Tom (Wright D waiter) Congratulations you survived engineering O.K.. Now is the world ready to survive you ?!! (Hope you guys can get it up this weekend—your plane that is!) GOOD LUCK! I LOVE YOU—GIMPS

Helen, Thanks for all the wonderful times we've shared. I hope we can enjoy many more. I love you. Eric

Keith, You're the best! Thanks for making all that studying more fun. Cookies and eclairs will always be exciting. Have a Blast in Germany but don't forget me. Luv, Alicia

TO CHERYL (our 2-year veteran R.A.): We raise our glasses to Hank's banks, the "Days" concert, Chippendales (almost) NYC ("It IS common courtesy to leave a 15% tip!"), 6-hour Penn. trip (do we hafta go back?"), "It doesn't work if it's limp!", "Is that my phone?", the sleepover on your floor, Billy Joel's "The Bridge", James' Dairy Mart runs (Beware of exploding diet coke), that Hagen Das will do you in every time!, burning the 2 a.m., 3 a.m., and 4 a.m. oil, dropping sinks, special dinner punch, Risky Business, Beverly Hills Cops (and bad Eddie Murphy imitations) Mary's stubbed toe, lounge rats, waiters crashing on the couches (wait a sec, what couches??), Hurricane Gloria and cold water, Christmas trees, "Friends and Lovers", Shane. . . Oh Shane!, Hey Bubba, 5 funnells!! I never get sick!, garbage can missing on 2nd, where's the keg hiding? Is this "aggreeable to everyone? NO DAMN IT IT'S NOT! Paint your room lately? Don't worry, I won't step in the paint tray. ABSOLUTELY! Really Cheryl, my friends aren't coming up this weekend! Cheryl, will you still respect me in the morning? And FINALLY to the end of your wooden back! Thanks for these and all the memories we share. Congratulations and good luck in everthing you do. We're gonna miss you! With lots of love, Wendy, Carmela, Beena, Mary, Kate, Lynn, Brian, Donna, Lori, Kim S., Laura, Chris, Debbie D., Dee, Michelle, Cathy, and Denise.

To my wacky roommate:
Hey Stace! Here's your personal your one and only at UCONN! Best of luck to you and Ehkim in L.A.—I'll miss you both. I had the best roommates this year! Love, Chris
P.S. You're a dork.

What do all these people have in common? Paula, Erica, Glen, Gina, Ed, Cheryl, Barrie, Don, Karen, Allan, Bill, Kim, Eric, Greg, and Mike. They made our jobs easy! Thanks from Judy, Sally, Susie, Marty Northwest Quad R.A.'s! Thank you all for a great year! We appreciate your dedication, your effort and your friendships. It has been our pleasure to work with you!

ACK! Four years at Happy Camp and I still have a few intact brain cells. KIM-bestest cellmate for three years, keep saving those nickles. STACY- YOU'RE GETTIN MARRIED! Never lose sight of that toilet brush. KAREN-keEp doing those drugs. ED- we always knew you were fried. LINDA- get that husband of yours to shave his head. SCOTT- it was tons of fun, I'll love you always, I learned more about the Lakers than I ever really wanted to, keep your hair cut, your nose clean- you know the rest. Thanks to the School of Nuts for making it all possible, I'm leaving now, N.G.

Sugar, This should convince you not to get revenge. A little water in the face never hurt anyone. Hope you feel better SOON! Look foward to the weekend. Happy 5th. Love You, Cool

TO MY MAIN SQUEEZE (D.H.Z.): Congratulations on making it out of UCONN. Here's to long walks on the beach, champagne, and Miami Vice, black jellybeans, H.C. and W.C., drive-in movies, Mansfield Hollow (by the lake), sleeping like the moon... to be continued. I Love You, Cinda

Sharon (a.k.a. MAD DOG, ABBOTT, OR BEAKER), Congratulations on finally getting your Enginerd Degree. Next semester won't be the same without you. Who will Taffy keep up all night? Good luck in the real world and with Sven. Your roommates, QT and Taffy

Caroline (Russell B), Hey Dingy- We made it! I can't believe we put up with each other all this time! (only kidding). We've had a lot of fun times. Always remember our trips into the city, Econ. 111, Newport, frozen cup milkshakes, etc. They've been fun but I know there's a lot more to come. Keep in touch. I Love Ya! Love, Inga

TO THE GUY WHO WANTED TO STEAL A BRIDGE: I HAVE BEEN REALLY HAPPY THESE PAST FEW WEEKS. I'M GLAD WE'RE TOGETHER!

Kathy (Bud), Maybe someday we can finish it properly but until then, thank you and good luck. Love, Patrick

TO DONNA, LORIE, MARY, KATE, WENDY, CARMELA, CHRIS, AND KIM OF HANKS B: You areall great friends. Thanks for being there when I needed you. LOVE RICH

Hi Michele! Congratulations! I wish you the best of luck in the future!! Love, Jane

To the future Deborah Ann Fiducia, Can I move the room around? See you this summer. Thanks for being so special.

Stefano, My ring finger is recieving a draft—only kidding! I'm having so much fun—you mean everything to me. No more hounding, okay? Sarah

To Alf's friend Liz (alias Motorcycle Mama) Tuck in your Puppets! Thanks for letting me hang around! Love Perky

RANDY, WHAT'S THIS A PENNY??!! HEY, I HEAR YOU SMILING!

AMES, Congratulations woman! You're outta here! Thanks for being a super roommate and an awesome partying buddy! Good luck in the working world and have a great time in Newport this summer! I'm going to miss ya Amers! Love, Sharon MAGS, Here's the personal. Just want to say thanks for making my return semester great. You're a true brother in every sense of the word except sex. (but some things are excusable). See you next time. Love, Dollar P.S. Who's your buddy?

PETE, YOU'VE DONE IT! I KNEW ALL THAT HARD WORK WOULD PAY OFF. EVERYTHING IS ALMOST PERFECT. ALL WE HAVE TO DO IS WAIT TILL I GET OUT. CONGRATULATIONS! I LOVE YOU! KARLEEN

USG officers 'learn from their mistakes'

By Pamela Peterson
Daily Campus Staff

Saying that they had "learned from their mistakes," USG officials have called this year a "foundation," for future growth.

USG officers consider their past year a success, partly because of improvements made to their constitution.

The new constitution, which was adopted by the Constitutional Review Committee April 1, approved campus wide April 7 and 8, will go before the Board of Trustees in July for approval.

The proposed constitution is "more functional and easier to understand," said USG President Kraig St. Pierre. "It leaves no gray areas and should allow our organization to run more smoothly."

"The roles of chairpersons and officers is now more clearly defined. Also, basic changes in election processes and fraternity representation were made," Ross Garber, recently elected vice-president said.

"This year was a rebuilding year, a time to grow," said Steven Protter, public relations committee chairman. "We have grown in many ways,"said Garber. "Positive aspects of the past year lie in the new constitution, our organization strengthened, committees were active, and our ties with the administration became stronger. We even have two legislative liaisons to Hartford."

"We shed our old image, the image of an organization with its' members fighting among themselves," St. Pierre said. "We've begun to plant seeds for a new unified organization working together for common goals instead of for their (USG assembly members) own initiatives."

"We're not a young peoples' politician's club," added Garber.

"We've moved away from the interorganization personal politics, we've pulled together," Protter said

Micheal Kainen, newly elected Comptroller, said, "most significant for us is that we have the ability to get things done."

"We've finally recognized that we can get things done with the administration and they've realized that they can get things done with us," St.Pierre said. "This largely had to do with President Casteen. He brought with him a new tone, to make the university a better place."

"In the past year we haven't had too many major problems," Garber said.

"We ran into a problem with unfinished business concerning the 1986 yearbook staff. We stumbled a lot trying to clean that up. But, we've rebuilt a successful staff and yearbook sales are up," Protter said.

When asked about downfalls of the past year, St. Pierre said, "A perfect example is the Nutmeg, we learned from our mistakes and tend not to repeat them. We knew what was wrong and what had to be done."

Last year there were delays in the Nutmeg, UConn's yearbook, as well as cost overruns that USG had to absorb.

Looking back over the year, Garber said, "It's been a good year in addition to our doing our tasks better. We've taken a look at our good points and bad points. We're building a foundation to grow on in future years."

St. Pierre said, "More and more the growing fun and frienships within our organization is what brings success. Good relationships and interaction are not a small thing. Students get involved for a valuable experience and obviously an additive for resumes. There's not a lot of motivation, we can't give money or credit, but a good time and a sense of belonging to an organization is what matters. We've done very well throughout the entire assembly. People leaving feel their involvement with USG has been a good experience. In the past it has been believed that the organization wasn't worth the time and energy."

Looking back at the past year St. Pierre said, "It's been a hard working but fun year. I'm looking forward to next year."

Commander of AFROTC to retire after 3 years of service at UConn

Col. John R. Kuester, commander of the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (AFROTC) at UConn will retire from active duty on July 1 after 24 years of service.

Kuester, a command pilot with more than 6,000 hours flying time, has been the ROTC Commander since July 1984. Some of his earlier assignments include tours in Nevada, Indiana, Hawaii, New York, New Hampshire and Vietnam. Under his command, the AFROTC unit has amassed an impressive record of achievement. Most notable is the string of excellent evaluation ratings received from the Air Force Inspector General.

Kuester attributes the success of his unit to two things: the outstanding Air Force personnel that he has to work with and the excellent support received from the university as a whole. "I could not have asked for more receptive, congenial and supportive people than President Casteen, Dr. Wiggins, Dr. Elias, Dr. Quinley, Dr. Harris, and my College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Deans, Dr. Vasington and Dr. Lindley."

Kuester said the success rate of the UConn ROTC graduates has historically exceeded the national average. "The quality of the typical UConn student has allowed our cadets to compete very favorably with other cadets from hundreds of private and public institutions throughout the country that have ROTC programs."

Kuester said the most challenging assignment he has had in his 24 year career was the year he spent flying a cargo aircraft in Vietnam. "It was challenging because I was being shot at everyday on every mission. I was involved in supporting the total airlift requirements of the war which meant I never knew from one day to the next if I was transporting vegetables and live animals to a marine outpost; ammunition or fuel to troops not located close to a major support base; or flying to a far-reaching out-post to pick up soldiers who had been killed in action. Obviously, this latter task was the most distasteful part of my job. Because of the nature of my mission, my flying skills were really sharpened in Vietnam."

Kuester said his most interesting assignment was at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu where for six years he traveled extensively throughout the United States, the Pacific, and Southeast Asia transporting military and civilian VIPs. Of the hundreds of trips that he took, the most memorable one was in 1978 when he was selected to transport a congressional delegation to Beijing, China, he said. "In 1978, very few congressmen, and even fewer Air Force pilots and aircraft, had visited China. To interface

The year was successful for The Daily Campus, which received a medalist award from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association and individual awards for three of its staff members — cartoonist Robert Monahan, sports editor Joe Erwin and sportswriter Paul Orzulak.

Daily Campus comic strip characters Scroggy of "Frat House" and Stickboy of "Stickboy" became cult heroes on campus.

The school year 1986-87 may well be remembered as a year of starts — new construction on campus, a revitalized basketball program and new faculty and administration — and a year when some time-honored traditions were re-examined and done away with.

directly with the people of China, walk freely throughout downtown Peking and see huge portraits of Lenin and Mao Tse Tung hung everywhere, and walk on China's Great Wall were experiences I'll never forget."

Kuester said his most rewarding assignment has been at UConn. "Being in a position to influence, direct and help mold the future military leadership of the Air Force has provided me with the greatest amount of personal satisfaction."

The ROTC commander's positions are in demand by Air Force colonels. In fact, the Air Force has four volunteers for every available position. In order to "share the wealth" the Air Force allows their commanders to stay at this assignment for only three years. "It's hard to accomplish all your goals in three years and it's also difficult to leave such a satisfying job, but I knew when I came that I'd be here three years, no more, no less. And I'm thankful that I could spend three years in one place without having to move a couple of times," said Kuester. His replacement will be Col. Jim Cavanaugh who is coming from Whiteman Air Force Base in Missouri. Cavanaugh's background is in the missile field.

Day of Pride attracts minority students to UConn

By Jayne Keedle
Campus Correspondent

The University of Connecticut was not Martha Nates' first choice to study engineering. But after she was told about UConn's Day Of Pride, a ceremony used to recruit minority high school students, she applied.

The Day of Pride, which started in 1971, honors 100 outstanding minority students each year and awards 15 full-time merit scholarships, covering all costs for four years at the university. Nates won one--worth approximately $6,000 a year--and decided to come.

"It was too good to pass up," Nate said. But it was not just the money.

"We (the day of pride students) were invited to the campus a few times. We had meetings with teachers in our areas of interest and with other students. I came up here and I talked to people and realized that UConn was a competitive, challenging school. They did a good job of recruiting," Nates said.

In 1986, 400 state high school students applied for the scholarships. To qualify, they must be in good academic standing, have good recommendations from teachers, and must write an essay.

To keep their scholarships, they must maintain at least a B average throughout their college career. Of the 28 students who have accepted scholarships, only one student has dropped out--because of illness.

"I think what attracts people and keeps them here is that the university really seems to care. People working on the Day of Pride really show an interest. They keep track of you and see how you're doing," Nates said.

The Day of Pride is one way UConn recruits minority students.

The Center for Academic Programs (CAP) runs a summer program for incoming freshmen and high school students to help them prepare for college life.

In the Husky Ambassador Program potential applicants are contacted by UConn students who visit high schools and invite applicants to spend a night on campus.

Husky Ambassadors recruit all potential UConn applicants but give special attention to minorities as part of UConn's commitment to increasing minority enrollment.

Of the 14,796 students at the university in 1985, only 1,066 are minorities--460 blacks, 29 Native Americans,296 Asian Americans and 281 Hispanics. The university's goal is to increase minority enrollment until it at least equals the percentage of minorities in the state--about 12 percent of the more than 3 million residents.

C.A.P. was created in 1967, in part, to supplement substandard high school education. Some students may not have taken needed courses in mathematics or English to prepare them academically for university classes.

CAP aims to prepare students already accepted to the university for fall classes by offering a summer session. Each summer, 100 students live at Storrs and take entry level classes in English, mathematics and science for college credit. The four regional campuses take 20 students apiece.

An early identification program has been started by Dr. Roger N. Buckley, a history professor in his third year as director of CAP.

He feels that many students are not taking courses in high school that will give them a solid academic background for university.

The program is aimed at students who high school counselors and teachers feel are candidates for university , recommending appropriate level math and English courses to be taken in high school.

Students with academic ability should be identified as early as junior high school and should be taking classes to prepare them for university , Buckley said. CAP staff works with high school students and their parents, as studies have shown that students are more successful if parents encourage them to plan for higher education.

One CAP success story is Dr. Franklin Chang- Diaz, the first hispanic aboard a space shuttle flight-- the Columbia, NASA'S last successful flight. He was in the CAP Program in the 1970's because he had difficulties with English. He later got his doctorate in nuclear engineering from M.I.T.

But problems remain. Marie Kabemba, a forth year political science major who came to UConn from Zaire, says one problem she has here is not knowing her professors.

CO-OP NEWS & VIEWS

#6 IN A SERIES ABOUT THE UCONN CO-OP'S NEW PATRONAGE REBATE PLAN

WON'T THE COOP SAVE MONEY IF MEMBERS DON'T SAVE THEIR RECEIPTS AND TURN THEM IN?

No! We are planning to distribute at least as much in patronage rebates as we would have if we were still using the 5% textbook discount method, approximately $225,000.

Even if some members don't save and submit their receipts the total amount to be distributed will not lower. However, the amount received by those who do save and submit their receipts will be greater.

There are three determinants in how much of a patronage rebate you will receive:

X. Total Amount Available for Patronage Rebate. This is determined by the Board of Directors, planned to be about $225,000 this year.
Y. Total Value of Receipts Saved and Submitted by All Members.
Z. Total Value of Receipts Saved and Submitted by You.

Patronage Rebate You Will Receive = $\frac{X}{Y} \times Z$

There's really not much mystery to it. And it's easy for you to get your share!

Living with off-campus landlords: tips

By Kristin Glennan
Campus Correspondent

Matt Simon, not his real name, went back to his apartment in Willimantic after a day of classes and the lock to his door had been changed. He hadn't been offered a key. Later he learned that his landlord had entered his apartment unannounced and took pictures of the damages he was prepared to charge Matt with when he moved out.

Similarly, Mrs. Thompson discovered that her front door had been replaced and she wasn't given a key. Instead, her landlord asked her to use the back door. Connecticut Legal Services is handling these cases from their Willimantic office. They have handled many more like these.

One of the reasons that landlords in the UConn area get away with lockouts and other illegal practices, is that students, and first-time renters, are largely uneducated about housing law.

The first place to start in defining landlord and tenant responsibilities is within the lease.

A lease is a contract and is negotiable. Once signed, the terms of the lease govern the legal relationship between the parties and oral agreements outside of the lease are not enforceable.

It is important to realize that the lease is negotiable, and to question the terms of the lease before signing. One Willimantic landlord has included terms in his lease which prohibit drinking in the units, overnight visitors, and parties of any kind. Although these clauses may not hold up in court, with a signed contract the landlord may try to catch the tenant breaching the lease. He may begin eviction proceedings upon that basis.

Although these clauses are not illegal, they are unnecessary and should be avoided if possible. If you suspect that a lease may contain unenforceable clauses, you should ask questions before you sign. Before moving into an apartment, take the time to read the small print. Don't be afraid to question a clause. Once your signature is on the lease, it will be too late to dispute its terms.

•don't allow blank spaces on your lease — they could be filled in later;

•don't allow the landlord to thrust his responsibilities (i.e. for repairs) onto you;

•don't waive the right to your security deposit if you leave early — he only gets the security deposit if you have committed damage to the unit above and beyond normal wear and tear;

•try to remove a clause forcing you to give thirty days notice before leaving an apartment — in a college town it is really unnecessary and failure to give it may mean forfeiture of your security deposit;

•question any clause that requires a late charge on rent paid five days late. According to the law, this clause is not valid. The tenth of the month is statutorily the day after which rent is considered late. After the tenth day, a tenant can be served eviction papers for nonpayment of rent. If rent is accepted after the eleventh, the tenant cannot be evicted (but will not receive interest on his security deposit for that month) and may then be charged a late fee.

A tenant's responsibilities according to a lease will typically include:

•compliance with local housing and building codes which affect health and safety and;

•maintaining the unit in reasonably clean condition.

Many leases also include phrases which prohibit committing willful damages or disruptive conduct.

The landlord's responsibilities include:

•compliance with applicable building and housing codes;

•maintenance and repair of the premises;

•repair and maintenance of the common areas, and;

•provision of the services of electricity, heat, and hot water.

"You have to go out of your way to get to know the professors," she said.

"Right now I need to get two recommendations for law school. One of them has to be from a professor. But I don't think there's a professor who knows me well enough to write a recommendation. I think that professor student relations is something that UConn should work on."

UConn is trying. As part of the CAP Program, eighteen faculty members and no more than five CAP students, meet about onceevery two weeks to discuss students problems.

The mentoring program gives students the opportunity to get to know professors informally, to learn how to budget their time, to know how the library works and to know where to find help for specific problems.

The groups make the students feel more at home at the university-- which, because of its size can be intimidating for some people, Buckley said.

Eleanor Gail Myers, a third semester nursing student, was in CAP and said it helped prepare her for UConn. She is not in the mentoring program and says she has a hard time getting to know professors.

"I'm usually in big classes so I don't get to know my professors. I'm just a grade to them." she said. "But it was my decision. I had a choice to go to a small school in my home town. I chose a big campus instead."

Because of the feeling by some that they're just a number here, the Husky Ambassadors were formed to recruit students. The 120 ambassadors contact all high school students eligible to apply and answer their questions. The ambassadors emphasize minority recruitment.

Alma Scott, a senior in Management and Human resource Development, and Gregg Jablonsky, a senior in communications, are the coordinators.

"We will be calling the Day of Pride students," Scott said. "One of the overall goals of the Husky Ambassador program is to personalize the university to incoming students; at the moment, applying to UConn is like applying for a Texaco credit card."

Scott herself knew very little about the university before coming here; she applied because she thought the campus was attractive and it was close to her parents' home in Hartford.

Ambassadors also dispel myths about the university. The myth that UConn is too impersonal, or alleged racist incidents reported in the press may keep some minority students from applying.

Cassandra Wilson, a senior, is an ambassador and is President of the black student association. Two years ago while calling minority students as part of an alumni association recruitment drive, she noticed that several students had questions about racism on campus

"A couple of people were worried because of the rally about 'KKK' being printed on UConn shirts." Wilson said, referring to a protest because the letters 'KKK' were highlighted in yellow on the new UConn sweatshirts. The shirts were not intended to make a racial slur but the designers did not realize the configuration could spell KKK.

But the administration has made a concerted effort to increase sensitivity towards minorities.

"I really do think that the university is trying hard to become more sensitive to the blacks," Wilson said. "I think that the main reason that problems may occur is that most people are not culturally aware of the black experience."

"I never really encountered any prejudice here. If there was any, it was subtle. No one has ever really said anything to me or treated me unkindly, and I kind of expected it with the school being so big," she said.

Michael Wells, who came to UConn after being in the army, has also never experienced any overt prejudice. And he came from the North End of Hartford and was in the Black Panther Juniors, a militant black separatist group in the 1960's. Wells, too, knew very little about the university before coming here.

"I knew that in my surroundings there would be a majority of white folk but that didn't faze me at all. I feel I can deal with just about

Bye UConn

GREEKS

TO THE DELTA ZETA WITH THE RED TOYOTA. If you would care to partake in a worthwhile rendezvous, meet me Friday, in font of Montieth at 3:00. The lawncutter

Tim, It first began, over two years ago, here in the personals. So, it's fitting to continue it here. I'm looking foward to our future. I Love You. Joanne

HILLTOP

To Ilan, William, and Scott (those HOT guys of Hilltop): You guys are the greatest! Thanks for making my first semester up here a lot of fun—I'll miss you next year!. Love, Sinthia

To Dave M., Congratulations on graduating! Good luck! Love, Cathy

To all my Hilltop moms and dads who are graduating—Best of luck and much success. Thanks Michele, Pat, Dawn, Jeanette and Dave for helping me through a rough freshman year. You are the greatest and I love ya lots!

Lune—are you reviewing? Oh so you're having "white wine". Whose making you drink it—could it be . . . Satan? Well isn't that special. Just like you! You are one VERY special person—thanks for everything—especially for being a great friend. Good luck in your future and watch out for Lacrosse balls otay? I love you very much—Son.

Robin (Hale):
Good Luck in Med School! When things get too hectic just remember—things could be worse: Evilene, Noid, Bing-Bing's caar, "Hee hee ha ha", B-Fat, Blue Sweater, Mad turns Silly, Zippy the Pinhead, still copulating or has castration occurred?, HUSKIES, VIPS, Natural vs. Nappy, vacuuming at 7 a.m., no more Oreo ice cream, Okaay, Frankie. . .Hasta la vista, baby!!
The 1.411 Club

Dan, happy non-graduation! I'll miss you. Promise to write back at least once? Anyway, maybe I'll see you this fall. . . Love, Lena

Flo, a super special friend. I'll never forget all the great times we've shared. Best of luck to you. Look out California! Love, Rhon

Sue, I guesss L.R. was wrong about friends rooming together! We've lasted awhile! I can't believe our time is up! I'm going to miss you lots! Love, Jodi

Sue W. Care for a fall soccer game? Twist my arm! But no OZ! I'll miss you! Love, Jodi

ON BEHALF OF THE WOMEN OF UCONN, WE'D LIKE TO THANK THE SENIORS OF THE 6th FLOOR ELLSWORTH SINGLES, "KINKY K.L." AND "DESIRABLE DARYL" FOR A PASIONATE, LUSTFUL, EROTIC, STIMULATING, SUCCULENT YEAR BEYOND OUR WILDEST FANTASIES!! But seriously guys, thanks for the great times. Our first year here at UCONN wouldn't have been the same without you! Good Luck in the future, we're gonna miss you !!! LOVE, THE 9TH FLOOR BABES

Kris and Butts, Did I tell you that your couch has my name on it next year? Who is RANDY MILLER? I'm going to miss you guys! Love, Jodi

Lisa, Four short years ago I found you and ML hibernating in 408. Boy have we changed. Get psyched for our drinking contest Friday! I'm going to miss you. Love, Jodi.

Lynn on Hale 2nd: We've been through a lot together over the past four years, and I'll never forget all the memories. You're the best roommate and friend anyone could ever want. Always remember our crazy times: tobacco, grinders, Spring Break, late night munchies, and semi after semi- have you seen my glasses? I'll just stand by the food. And what about my date who fell down the stairs? Did you ever feel like somebody was watching you in the shower? CALLL MEEE TOMMORROW!! I'm going to miss you. Love and friends forever, Karen

Typhoid Mary, what a typist! What a back rub! I'll bring the baby oil next time, ok? Is this corny enough for you. How about this? I Love You (forever even) - Rufus

CARI: Well, 5 years, 2 colleges, and 4 majors later... We are finally getting out! Lots of luck. Love and smiles! Friends forever, JJ

Carol... It won't be the same without you. You've been a good friend! Never forget PB&J. ("Rumor has it"); What are you high?; Love Slaves; Bollo; the window, etc... Best of luck! See you over the summer. I'll miss ya! Love, Care P.S. aTHANK YOU!!!

Dear Carol: I never knew that the nightmare I had would eventually become a dream come true. Congratulations to a fine young lady. I Love You Babe. Love, Michael

JUNGLE

Per Erica, Leah, Alicia, Giovanni, Vincenza, Paola, e tutti gli altri studenti che studieranno all'estero a Firenze, sono contento che noi staremo insieme in Italia. Speriam in un buon anno. Divertitevi quest'estate. Ricordate c'é unafesta a mia casa il 18 Luglio. Ci Vediamo!! Adei HARTFORD 3RD: Meat Monster, JJ, Dick, Debitora: RED LIPSTICK was nice but please NO MORE WHITE STICK. Mel, perhaps a PURPLE CUP. "You guys that's not my CAR" — someone's drugging my COFFEE, maybe it was the MUD. Jen, nice shift, who PIED? Who drove? Deb, how's Elton's HEART? Anyone for Denny's or better yet - CAKE! There's stuff in my cup, NUCLEAR FALL OUT! Flight 2:27 to France. GOOD LUCK.

Love, Dale

To the complaint department and Andy, too. Thanks for being there when I needed you. It's been a great year. Love, Trinka
P.S. Another trip to New Haven with some André?

The "Original" Hurley 3rd! — You know who you are. Thanks for the four greatest years of my life! Here's to growing up together, legality! Teds! Spring Weekends! Laughing and crying. We've been through a lot together and we'll be through much much more. Let's walk in style! GOOD LUCK! AND DON'T YOU FORGET ABOUT ME! I love you all! Karen

HUGGYBEAR — We've had so much fun this semester — too bad it's over. But we'll have even more fun this summer (beach...golf course...tennis court...) I love you lots, you big dummy! — Woogiebear

Jim, Gretchen, Cindy, Michelle, Mary-Kathryn, Melinda and all the Jungle council reps. and R.A.'s, you've all been great. No wonder why Jungle Council is one of the strongest councils around. Lots of luck for all of you. Love, Adele

J.M.P.2: God Blessed me when He had us. Me, I am THE luckiest woman in the world! Thank you for your support during my first semester as an RA and for taking care of me when I was ill. It'll be a difficult summer, but God has blessed us. Congratulations on your graduation. All my love. Your Snugglebunny.

HURLEY!!! Thanks to everyone for helping me feel comfortable in the dorm. This was an interesting, challenging and very rewarding semester for me. Have a great summer! Luv your RA: Sharon

Boom-Boom & Sis:
Live it up in the Netherlands next semester. Say your prayers but don't let that European "bug" get you hooked! I'm gonna miss you like crazy! Love, your U.C.W.T.C. Sister

Jen, The story of my life. It's been 2 yrs. 10 mos. and 3 days since you brightened my life. I just want you to know that, through it all, I LOVE YOU more than anything! Mark PARTY? Come to Steve's clambake. Will be held somewhere in North Branford sometime this summer. Tell him Rat sent you.

Chris: I can't believe how fast these two years have gone by. I'll never forget all the fun times we've had - late Thursday nights, driving Sue and Wendy crazy, Wildwood, partying with the guys from New London, and especially this Spring Weekend. I wish you all the luck in the world. I'll always be there for you. Thanks for being such a great friend and roommate. I love you. Karen

K — We bickered and fought,
we laughted and cried.
You had hope and I didn't.
You smiled and I lied.
But it's different now
I really do care!
You bring me more joy,
than my teddy bear.
My feelings for you have grown so strong.
I know we can last all summer long.
Listen, my HORNBAG. I just wanted to say,
I love you during peacetime so let's keep it that way! — L

To the boys on Tolland 2nd — don't you know that we love you?
When summer's here and far away we'll be,
one word will bring us happiness — ANGIE!
We hope Frank returns and Ralph doesn't get stuck in a 'blizzard.'
Kevin and Mitch — don't invest too much, you're not financial Andy will be with Missy,
so he's all set.
And we know John will buy whatever he can get.
Kyle, have fun fishing for those golfballs.
Ya' know, we're really going to miss these halls!
So when we're on the Hill (practically in the sky), please make sure you stop on by.
You know you're going to miss us, and we'll miss you, too.
We're glad we met you guys on Tolland 2nd.
Love, Laura, Brenda, Beth, Laurie.

L.K. — I want some t. Pass the chips. How about Pong? Remember Valentines Day. My nose hurts! Pass (or apply) the soap!! It's all been great - with more to come. Love ya', Gary P.S. Yeah. No more raincoats!!

Beth - I couldn't have asked for a better roommate than you. I'm really going to miss you next semester. I'm going to miss all those late night talks. Luv, Susan

Stacey,
Happy 20th you praying goddess. The bug is allowed to bite! We'll have a blast celebrating at the Cape and in Newport. We love you, Susan & Alaina

Chris, I could NEVER tell you how much our friendship has meant, in words. It seems like just yesterday that we met, now you're graduating! Though the distance between us will be great, our friendship will always remain in my heart and memories. You've been like a sister to me. Thanks for everything! Good luck in Louisville. Remember to come home to us as often as possible. — Love, Sue

PAM: IT'S BEEN AN INTERESTING SEMESTER. THINGS WILL GET BETTER, THEY ALREADY HAVE. HAVE A GREAT SUMMER. KEVIN I HAVE A CAT.

Wendy (R.A. Baldwin): You've been a great friend these past 2 years. Thanks for always listening. I'm gonna miss you next year. Lisa

Chris — Congratulations! I can't believe you're leaving us. You're a wicked good friend and we'll miss you a lot. I wish you the best of luck at Louisville and in the future! Love always — Wendel

Hi Sue! For some strange reason, I look forward to breakfast these days. Can't wait 'till next Thursday, either. Remember, this morning's b-fast is on you. See you at about 9:10. Jim Therese...uh I mean CHARISE - HAPPY BIRTHDAY ANIMAL! Hope it's deelightful! You're one of the best, thanks for an irreplacable friendship. I hope 20 is good to us! I lova ya, Jill.

Moe — Happy graduation!! From Hartford 4th. We'll miss you.

SHERRI - HAPPY BELATED BIRTHDAY. WOW, THE YEAR IS ALMOST OVER AND WHAT A YEAR. SUMMER SHOULD BE GREAT WITH YOU! BECAUSE I LOVE YOU — CHRIS

STEVE: Congrats for graduating — Have fun in the real world!! Love, your favorite sis, Sabrina

MCMAHON

SWEETHEART (PETE) I COULDN'T RESIST! Had to give you just one more! Which reminds me of how I can't seem to resist you (but that's a different story!) Maybe I can tell it to you some time, if you're good. I don't want this to be a blue personal (I want it to be a red hot one!) GOOD LUCK on your exams and study hard honey! Love, Spurts. P.S. Psyched for the summer with you!!

Michelle, McMahon 7N I'm glad that we've become close and had some great and strange times together. UH OH Have to sneeze, eeergh OH NO another skid mark. Cranking that zootoo breath again. O.k. Woody, quit pointing left again. Sheeeeel, let's have a session. That squeeker really smells! Have a great summer. Love Brad

Milo and Ivette
Congratulations on your graduations! Best of luck and lost of love in the future! Love, John and Christine

Mon, Congradulations! It's over! This year went by so fast, but it was great, and I know there are many more for us in the future! I LOVE YOU!! Mike

We're outta' here

MCMAHON

To all my friends who've helped me thru five years—you gave me wonderful memories that I will never forget!! I love you and will miss you A LOT!! I'm out of here but I'll be back to visit! SPECIAL THANX TO Luke, Sheila, Susana, Doug, Amy and Lisa!! 143 BT BETH

Doey: I love you! Cafie

To Pete the pharmacy Geek who reads The Bible on Thursday nights—let's go out for a drink after exams. Love the waitress from mirage.

John the best little brother anyone could have. We'll have to go out after finals. I'm getting psyched for Cleveland. You better go! Love Sis

For undercover agent 426,
You're needed for case GPA 4.0. The dress code is black cap and gown. Come equipped with your Lethal Weapon and be prepared to take on the real world. The commencement must take place on May 24.
From agent A.H. Bach.

TO MIK, Congradulations Buddy, we envy you. It's been a great 4 years. Hope you can watch our kids some day. Love the Gumbas Barrington: The past 3 years couldn't have been complete with out you. Guess what?! I always will. Champagne and Pizza by the TV light Sunday Night.

DJ BIRD: Thank you for all of the wonderful things that you do to me. What else will it take for you to play my songs? With love, your Insatiable Woman

Lynn,
We've been thru a lot these past 2 years— you've been a great roommate and an even better friend. Remember all our crazy times and that I love ya—Monica

Michael, Remember all the laughter and tears and how much we've shared with each other. We .e got some tough times ahead of us, but together we can make it!! I love you!! Love always, Me

Kathy, Michelle, Di, Chris, Kim, Millie, Annie, Rose, Lori, Suzi—What can I say girls! You guys are the BEST! Jungle memories of Hartford 4th will always live! I love you guys! Love "STACK" P.S.
DOUG, I'll always remember the special times—Love you, Mary. FAREWELL UCONN!!

JOANIE—YOU HAVE BEEN THE BEST FRIEND ANYONE COULD HOPE TO HAVE. COLLEGE MEMORIES WOULD BE NOTHING WITHOUT YOU. I'LL MISS YOU ROOMIE! LOVE, KELI

Kathy, McMahon 7S: We're going to miss you sooo much!! Good Luck and don't forget us!! P.S. LOVE your hair! Love, Andi and Shan

W.S.-
You don't know what it's like,
Baby, you don't know what it's like.
To love somebody,
to love somebody
Like I Love You
Hank, Jr.

Monica, Congratulations! You made it with two credits to spare (phew!). Good luck in Graduate School (hopefully UConn). I'll miss you, roomie! Love, always, Lynn

My dear Wayne: Well, this is the end AND the beginning. Your days of classes and finals are over, but our life together has just begun. I know we have much more to look forward to and I will always be right behind you through all. Our love is a forever thing, Pud and I'm so glad you're a part of my life. And remember: "If somethin's not broke, don't fix it!" I Love You, Honey. Always, Roo. P.S. Happy Graduation! Get a job!

Scout, McMahon 4N: Dewey, Dewey, Dewey! It was great having you back! You're the best! Love, Boomer

Hayley- Four years have come and gone quicker than we thought they would. There have been so many memories: Our "wedding", 1s, M.A., soccer games and E &K, Yale Bowl, not Halloween, chips and dip, S.M., almost transferred, swingles, 4N, Civic Pub, C.R., I'm dead! McMahon, football, Homecoming, finally 21, smartfood and peanut M&M's, sleazer, what the hell, a wicked lot, Ted's, Huskies, etc. I never could have asked for a better roommate these past four years. You've made them so special. Thank you for always being there. I'll miss you so much! I Love You Roomie! Carolyn

Nicole, Cindy, Hope, Jean, Pammy, Mac, Terry, Rick, and Bobby- What would UConn and especially my senior year have been without you? Thank you for so many special memories. I Love You All and will miss you tremendously!! Love, Carolyne

OFF-CAMPUS

Yvonne Lourds Sabin ELSE YLS Congradulations! You're an alumni now! At this point, I would like to wish you best of luck in whatever your future plans are. I've had an unforgetable year with you, and I hope you won't forget me once you move into Boston this summer. Get ready for a tour in the Greek Ilses this summer. Another summer full of excitement and surprises. This message was for Yvonne the Honeymou ar Else "H Atanh Moy". Yours always with love VV

Mary (FRESH FUN, TRIPLETS, MARY MOOSE, WICKI. . .) THE LAST FOUR YEARS HAVE BEEN GREAT. THANKS FOR BEING SUCH A GREAT ROOMMATE. LOVE YA! MAURA

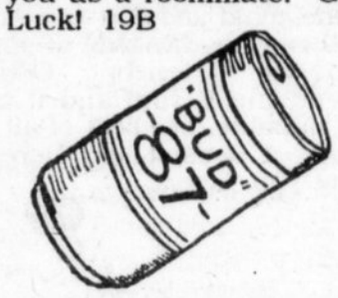
Yvonne, Maureen and Troi—Thanks for an unforgettable senior year. Even though we've all had our share of ups and downs throughout the year, remember that we always managed to work things out. Even though we're all going our separate ways, we have to stay in touch. I'll never forget you guys and all of the good time we've had. Best of luck to you always. Love, Dora

Douglas Stephen Morgan, You really are a jigsaw puzzle! I'm going to miss trying to solve you! Me

FESTER, It's been a great four years. You've been a great friend. Remember the good times: Kappa Sig, camping, and parties. Thor, Mark, and Roger.

THE BUSH, BABUSHKAS, BUMBLEBEES, BEADS, BEEFALO, BANANA RUM SMOOTHIES, AND THE LATEST, OBJ. PEACE AND APPLE CORES TO YOU.

Varsos, it was fun having you as a roommate. Good Luck! 19B



To all the members of Villa 126—Good luck with finals and have a great summer. How about Barbados the same time next year?

Dora, Maureen, Iroi, I cannot believe you gals are graduating. Well congrats and best of luck in your professional and love (especially Iroi) lives. Thank you for putting up with me all year, but then again what would you have done without me. Love VV

RADIO LIBERIA? I have a request. . .Keep the faith, never compromise, and enjoy yourself! Thanx for the good times and encouragement. Look out Liberia! Peace Ho!

DEAR LISA, KIM, MONIQUE, WELL THE TIME HAS FINALLY COME TO GRADUATE! WORDS CAN'T DESCRIBE WHAT IT WAS LIKE HAVING YOU AS ROOMMATES! YOU ARE ALL BRIGHT GIRLS AND I WISH YOU THE BEST OF LUCK. I'LL MISS YOU ALL. CONGRATULATIONS!
LOVE, STEPHANIE

Spikey, Congratulations on your graduation, (finally). I am going to miss you. (I already have). Good luck but not Goodbye. With love, Van (Halen)

To the house and former New Haven Buddies—It's been a wonderful four years—We love you and will miss you all. Let's never lose touch. Nancy and Diana ITTY You made it through one whole year! Thanks for being so"supportive" and waiting for me when I was 1 1/2 hours late in lab—Love, Lisa

SHARF & T.K. SO YOU DREGS ARE FINALLY OUTTA HERE. GO TO HUSKIES ON SATURDAY DUDES. GOTTA CELEBRATE—LESARGE EAST AND CREW.

Keith, The past 5 months have been terrific. I'm glad I finally gave in to the Werle charm?? Congratulations on making it to graduation and good luck in finding the perfect job. I might have to look into opening my own hotel (unionized, of course). Would you care to join me? I might need a secretary. Je t'aime Mary

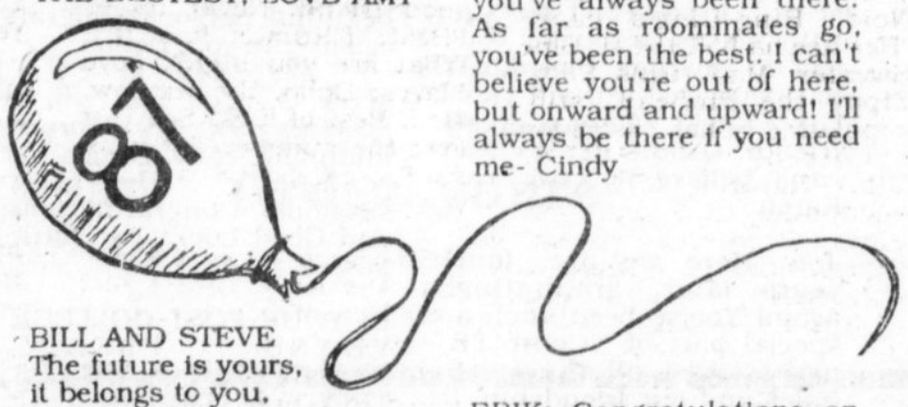
Liz, I'm glad we've become such good friends these past 2 years. You've added alot of laughs to my life (usually I'm laughing at you, not with you by the way). I'm not sure the advertising world is ready for you—maybe I should say good luck to them. I hope we end up in Boston together—I know we'd have an awesome time. Love, Mary

Diane P.,
To the best (almost) sister a friend could have. Never forget N.H., Te., or Fl. We have many memories which will last a lifetime. Looking forward to many more. Love, Bren.

DW32 I never was good at good-byes. These past 4 years, especially the past 2, have been quite unique! You've touched my life in an unforgettable way! We had our share of ups and downs, but I'll always cherish the many great times: notes in Spanish, J.B.G.T.M and UB40, July 4th, the H.I, when it used to rain, learning to surf, the first time we danced at Huskies, 2469, etc., Best of Luck!!! Love A Red Sox Fan

KAREN M.—HEY BABY—WE'LL MISS YOU! GREAT TIMES—START A PARTY AT TRIANGLE LATELY? (CAR ACCIDENT) TELL ME MORE—GREASE—CHAKACON—GEORGETOWN—BROWNIES—HAPPY HOURS. . .17A KEGS DON'T BLOW US OFF WE LOVE YOU, LINDA AND CLAUDINE!!

KAREN: WHAT CAN I SAY?! GREEKS, JEWS. ARE WE REALLY GOING TO THE BAHAMAS? WILL YOU MAKE MY BED? WHAT'S FOR DINNER? TOYS AND MORE TOYS!! SUPRISES, NEW CARS AND EVENTUALLY BOSTON?! THANKS FOR EVERYTHING—YOU'RE THE BESTEST, LOVE AMY



BILL AND STEVE
The future is yours, it belongs to you,
and with faith in God
and in yourself, too,
No hill is too high,
No mountain too tall-
With faith in the Lord
You can conquer them all.
I will always remember the happy times we shared.
Wishing you happiness and success in all you do.
Warmest Congratulations.
Love, Linda Louise.

BRIAN YOU LOSER. . .GRADUATION DAY AWAITS. . .5 MORE PITCHERS OF MARGARITAS TO CELEBRATE? IT'S BEEN AN EXPERIENCE! STAY FOREVER CRAZY AND FREE!

Dear C.D.,
No matter what the outcome, it's been a great four years. Thanks. I love you! J.W.

Gary (18A) What can I say? We don't spend much time together but I know you are always there. GOOD LUCK! and Happy Graduation! Love ya, Kar

16C Seniors—Congrads, good luck, and all that senior stuff! I know you'll all make it out there in the "real" world! Come visit me next year!! I'll miss ya's. Love you all, Kar

REEDFOSTER: TOPGUN GUY. HAVE A GREAT SUMMER. DROP US A LINE WE CAN PARTY. YOU BRING THE WOMEN * * THE JEEPMEN * *

NATE D. (NITWIT) IT'S BEEN REAL! Here's to whitewater canoeing and no school this summer! Pum Pum Pum. Duds. P.S. I will miss number 3!

To John, the football player I met at Carriage House Friday afternoon: I just wanted to wish you good luck in the future. It was really fun meeting you. Congratulations! Karen (Bruce)

Walt, Thanks for being such a good friend. I'll think of you in Europe. I hope that everything works out o.k. Love, Lena

BITTO: Congratulations! UConn will never be the same without you! Good luck in all of your new ventures! Hope your life holds much love and happiness!! J

Amy G, Carriage House: How does it feel to be a REAL teacher? Weird huh?! We have had some crazy times- "camping in the great outdoors", "How long should we boil the soup?" and always getting yelled at for talking! (not us!) Good luck in everything you do! Keep in touch! (you better) Love, Linda

MOLS- What can I say? Over the past four years you've always been there. As far as roommates go, you've been the best. I can't believe you're out of here, but onward and upward! I'll always be there if you need me- Cindy

ERIK: Congratulations on graduating from this place and good luck this summer in Sweden! Things just won't be the same here withourt you, so you had better visit ofter. I really love you, darling- Paula

Molly, Yo creme! It's been a great year, despite the fish deaths! Just think what $1.00 a week will get us next year! Love, Bloatus

TO THE GUY WITH THE GREAT SMILE WHOM I FELL IN LOVE WITH OVER A YEAR AGO- HAPPY GRADUATION- ENJOY! HOOT ROB LOVE YA .LINDA

OFF-CAMPUS

Hey #75, GOOD LUCK in whatever the future holds for you... Stay away from little black terriors! Love, #35 P.S. you owe me a pizza and I want my leather jacket back- I'm not such a whimp

Keith, "Maybe I'll have time next semester!" Well, time has run out!! You're a great person and a very special friend. Keep in touch!! Love, Suzy

ROB, JOHN, ERIC, MICHAEL, TIM, ZHIGIAN, BRIAN- SOME PEOPLE PREFER HARDWORKING WAITERS, BUT I FOR ONE CARE LESS FOR THEM, I LIKED YOU GUYS INSTEAD! THANKS FOR THE FREINDSHIP AND FUN
I'LL MISS YOU!- LINDA

DAN- You were the best R.A. and friend. Good luck in whatever you're gonna do! Keep in touch. We'll miss you. We love you! N&E

Amy, Deb, & Cindy: As we pass through that final graduation ceremony, always remember- Jungle parties (or maybe not), Coop bags, beating up Rob, sleeping under a bush, Raps, jumping off 5th floor McConaughy, pumpkin head, and "but it was Debbie's leg". Thanks for an excellent 4 years. I'm gonna miss you guys. Nyra

Hello, Strass-a--! Sorry for the beginning, but I needed to catch your atention! Now that I have it, I don't know exactly what to say, except that I love you, and school could never have been the same without you. You're the best. Love, Jennifer

Hey "IGLOO WASHER": There's many memories in four years. Thanks for being there through good and bad times. Don't let it end! Love, CITRUS FRUIT

Shaunna, We'll miss you next year but you won't be forgotton! We won't be ... good friends don't disappear. Love U2, Audra and Colleen

C- This last month has been great, you are the best. I Love You. J-

Lisa: Say "goodbye" to UConn and "hello" to marriage. Only 149 days to go! Thanx for making UConn bearable and wanting to stay with me the rest of your life. I Love You. Michael Adam, Just a personal to say thanks for all you've done for our dorm and rooms. Later. P.S. Keep smokin' and FRYBABIES RULE!!

Debbie, You are the most trusted friend, the person I never get tired of spending time with, never get tired of talking with, the best roommate ever. So many of my memories from UConn will be memories of things we did together. We hit it off from the very start (across the hall from each other)- my God, we were different then. We have changed so much, we have learned so much from each other- our many strengths and our many weaknesses. Our friendship through the years has only gotton stronger- we are so much more than just roommates. I am proud to be your bridesmaid and you and Art will always be two of my closest friends. Our friendship is rare and it is so valuable, but best of all I know it doesn't end here. Love You, Sonya

ANNE, THANKS FOR EVERYTHING,
ESPECIALLY MY I.D. WE'VE HAD TOO MUCH FUN! J.B. AND I WILL SEE YOU AT GRADUATION. I LOVE YA ROOMMATE, JUDI

To Steph, with lots of love, From Opus: Today, I wish for you all of the happiness that you are so deserving of. I wish that all of your dreams will be fulfilled and that sunshine and laughter will follow you where ever you go. I wish you all smiles, new adventures, new friends, and success in everything you do. I wish you the best of everything to match the best in you. And one more wish I have, more for me than for you, I wish I could be there to see all of these wishes come true

DEBBIE, Thank you for making my last two college years the brighest. I've got wonderful memories to take with me but better yet, I've got many more to look forward to. 143, P.J.

Sally Ann (Miss Sally), Brenda, Tracy, and Adam: Congratulations! No more Crawford D! Best of luck in all you do and keep in touch. Love, the 4th floor

Wilma, It's been an "absolutely" fun semester. You've been a great roommate. Have fun tonight at U2. Shots of Absolute await you Saturday. Love, Wanda

ELLEN, I just want to congratulate you for making it through four years of studying and partying! Thanks for being a really good friend. Tim

To the special seniors of MERRITT B- Annette, Celia, and Doreen. Best of luck with everything you do! The fourth floor won't be the same without you! We won't forget you, Lin, Queenie, and A, and don't you forget- We're on good time. Hey, ya wanna date? That's you, Harold! Ya big stud, take me to bed, or lose me forever! Don't eat the fruit!! WE'LL MISS YOU!! Love ya, Jen, Sharon, Michelle, Lisa, Susan, and Mary

Steph, Have a wonderful life. Visit. I Love You. Rick

Steph, What can I say except that these past two years have been pretty terrific! We've been through a great deal together, both the good and the bad, always sharing the laughter and the tears. I have to say that you've definitely been not only a terrific roommate, but also a really good friend. I'll never forget all the great times that we've shared. I want you to know that I think you're a pretty special person, who deserves the best that life has to offer. I wish you the best of luck in the future, I know you'll succeed in whatever you set out to do. You've certainly got what it takes to be one fantastic teacher! I Love You Steph. Here's to a lasting friendship! Love, Beth P.S. Tttt...

Jeffery, 5 years and tons of memories later they finally let you out of here! Be excited because you earned it! Don't just be an ""enginerd"- be a great one! Love, Jennifer

Goose- We've been through a lot. Love, friendship. Damn, I'm good but hell, you're better. You're a very special friend. Thanks for always being there even when I didn't want you to be.Clearwater we will never forget. Sand, shells, showers, w. cream, and endless contests. Thank you for beautiful memories. Good luck in Cal. and be happy! I'll miss you! See you in ten years. With much love, Whatever

Buck- Thanx for being there. You're a special friend and I'll miss you. (Don't forget:You owe me a balloon on my birthday!) Love, Julie

BETH, Don't be dismayed at goodbyes; a farewell is necessary before you can meet again, and meeting, after moments or lifetimes, is certain for those who are friends. Love always, Steph

Lori- Happy 22nd Birthday! You've been the best roommate. I'm really going to miss you next year. No more bumble to harrass! Love, Lesley responsibilities will make a tenant better prepared to handle any problems that may come up during the period of his or her tenancy.

Edmund Mierzwinski, director of UConn Public Interest Research Group said that the most complained about complexes serving the UConn area were, in order of frequency, Knollwood, Carriage House/Barbara Manor, and Willington Oaks. The most frequent complaints were: security deposits; receipt of rent and late payments and response to calls requesting maintenance.

Of these "systematic abuses," Mierzwinski says that the issue of security deposits is the most serious. Legally, a security deposit can only be retained if a landlord can prove that the tenant or someone within the tenant's control had damaged the landlord's property during the time of tenancy. But some landlords, and specifically, some landlords serving the UConn campus have a history of wrongfully retaining security deposits.

A security deposit cannot exceed two month's rent, is payable upon moving into an apartment, cannot be used for upkeep or normal maintenance costs and must be returned (with interest) within 30 days after the tenant leaves unless a list of damages has been sent.

The manager at Walden Apartments explained that she takes two month's rent to guard against a student leaving without paying the last month's rent, and to ensure that there is enough money to cover any damages. Yet a student at Knollwood Apartments said that some tenants he knows were each charged a two month's rent security deposit, rather than being charged as a Knollwood unit. The attempt to obtain such a high deposit was based on the tenants' reputations as partiers.

A second problem, according to Mierzwinski, is when the landlord retains the security deposit without proving damages. This varies widely from one landlord to the next.

Cynthia Richter, manager for Woodhaven Apartments, said that it is rare for her to keep someone's security deposit. She returns 90-95% of her security deposits. If she sees any minor damage, she urges the tenant to "go back in and fix it up before they leave." Then she will return the deposit.

The manager at Walden Apartments, Dee Wiggins, said it usually takes her two weeks to return a security deposit. Her student-tenants "usually take care of their apartments," and are entitled to the return of their security deposits.

Owen Mark Sanderson, the landlord for Knollwood, Clubhouse, Oakwod, Maplewood, and Millbrook Apartments, however, while clearly having more units to maintain, tends to have more of an occasion to withhold his student-tenant's deposits. The Clerk of the Rockville Small Claims Court said that there have been fifteen cases in recent years involving Sanderson or his rental association, South Campus Associates. At least eight of the fifteen were security-deposit-related.

All of the tenants I spoke to at Knollwood say that they do not expect to get their security deposits back. Their landlord, Sanderson, has been unavailable for comment throughout the period of research for this article. Frustrated and resigned, these students will not take their cases to small claims. Though it only costs $15 to file and it doesn't require an attorney, it intimidates many people. You do risk that it will be transferred to the regular docket. This intimidates many, and convinces others that they must get a lawyer. As a result of the transfer they may be forced to drop the case.

In order to transfer a case, one of the parties (in this case the landlord) files a motion and an affidavit claiming that there is enough evidence to merit a trial and pays a fee of $45.

By transferring, he is able to indirectly stall the trial for months. By the time the trial actually comes up, the student may be long gone and the landlord would receive the security deposit, plus interest, without having to prove damages.

There are now "housing specialists" in the major cities who provide advice for people who decide to represent themselves in housing court on cases that have been transferred. Unfortunately, these people do not serve this area. Although many students would be unable to qualify for representation from Connecticut Legal Services (an agency which provides aid to low-income persons), they may go to these attorneys for legal advice. Although the procedure is much more complex in the Judicial Court, you are never required to hire an attorney. If you do decide to fight and you are "forced" to hire an attorney, the person transferring the case, should he lose, may be required to pay attorney's fees.

Of the "systematic abuses," the issue of security deposits is most serious. Legally, a security deposit can only be retained if a landlord can prove that the tenant or someone within the tenant's control has damaged the apartment. But some landlords — specifically, some landlords serving UConn — have a history of wrongfully retaining security deposits.

A multiple choice quiz on "Star Wars"

•How much do you know about 'Star Wars'? Despite Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative being one of the major issues of our time, it seems as if the general public hears very little other than Reagan's assurances that it is a positive move that will provide the U.S. with the ultimate defensive system.

We have compiled below a short quiz concerning the negative side of 'Star Wars' — perhaps a more realistic side. The information used to formulate these questions was gathered from credible sources and should not be dismissed simply as propaganda.

Please take the time to inform yourself about this far reaching issue that will affect you in the years to come.

1. Nationwide, how many scientists have signed pledges not to accept research money for 'Star Wars' (known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative)?

(a) 0 (b) about 200 (c) about 1000 (d) about 7000

2. Before President Reagan prepared the speech in which he publicly introduced his 'Star Wars' strategy, he consulted:

(a) "technical experts in the Pentagon concerned with research in this area" (b) "The White House Science Council" (c) Ann Landers (d) None of the above or Nancy

3. True or False: The "Journal of the Federation of American Scientists" call SDI "Unfeasible, expensive, and dangerous... misconceived in every possible way. It addresses the wrong problem, gives every indication of making it worse and makes inadvertent escalation in crises more likely than less."

4. True or False: No member of the faculty of the School of Engineering at the University of Connecticut is allowed to participate in SDI research, regardless of whether or not they would be allowed to publish or discuss their work.

5. The hair-trigger laser and particle beam weapons needed for SDI would have to be managed by very complex computers. How many lines of computer code would such a system need?

a) 42 (b) the number of lines in an average CS 110 program (700) (c) 1000 times the average CS 110 program (d) 10 million lines

6. 'Star Wars' would cost the United States:

(a) about one million dollars (b) about one hundred to five hundred million dollars (c) about one billion dollars (d) about one hundred billion to one trillion dollars

7. True or False: As reported by the Washington Post: "By 1990, nearly enough will have been spent on defense during the Cold War — $3.7 trillion in constant 1972 dollars — buy everything in the United States except the land: every house, factory, train, plane, refrigerator..."

8. Who, if anyone, has declared it will not use nuclear weapons first in the event of a war?

(a) the U.S., but not the U.S.S.R. (b) both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. (c) the U.S.S.R., but not the U.S. (d) neither country

9. 'Star Wars' would defend against:

(a) cruise missiles (b) submarine-launched missiles flying at low altitudes (c) "suitcase" weapons (d) none of the above

10. "Nuclear Winter" is a world-wide state of environmental conditions characterized by extreme cold, darkness, and increased radiation levels that many prominent scientists have theorized would occur after a thermonuclear war. How many megatons (1 megaton = 1 million tons of TNT) would be required to trigger a nuclear winter? (Both the U.S. and the Soviet Union have about 10,000 megatons in their nuclear stockpiles)

(a) 10 (b) 100 (c) 1,000 (d) 10,000

Answers:

1. D.— about 7,000, including Nobel Laureates, according to John Kogut, a University of Illinois physicist and an organizer of the national movement as reported by the Hartford Courant.

2. D. — According to John Bardeen, twice Nobel Prize winner in Physics, Reagan consulted neither 'a' nor 'b'. Ann Landers and Nancy Reagan refused to comment.

3. True.

4. False. — According to Wesley L. Harris, dean of the UConn School of Engineering, "Any of my faculty who wish to do SDI research may do so," as long as they are free to publish and discuss their work.

5. D. — According to John Kogut as reported in the Washington Spectator, "It would require 10 million lines of computer code, which could not be reliably tested except during an actual nuclear conflict. any computer expert can testify that no computer program, even one 10,000 times smaller, runs correctly the first time. If this vast system failed to destroy even a small percentage of incoming ICBMs, the U.S. would be reduced to ashes." A report in Science adds that "The computing demands of a comprehensive missile defense system are such that no existing technology or innovation on the horizon is capable of ensuring its reliability."

6. D. — Hundreds of billions to one trillion dollars according to former Secretaries of Defense Harold Brown and James Schlesinger, and senior Pentagon spokesman of this Administration. One trillion dollars is equal to one million dollars every day for the next 2,730 years.

7. True, too true.

8. C. — "The Soviet Union has declared it will not use nuclear weapons first in the event of a war with the United States, though it has asserted the right to respond in kind." The Nation Jan. 12, 1985. The U.S. has made no such declaration of no first use. A 'Star Wars' defense would allow the U.S. to possibly survive the counter strike that would almost certainly follow a first strike. The principle of deterrence would become obsolete making the whole nuclear situation even more unstable.

9. D. — According to the Washington Spectator, 'Star Wars' would provide no defense against any of these types of weapons. It would only be designed to disable intercontinental ballistic missiles — the percentage of these that it would be effective against is unknown. Inexpensive decoys would greatly decrease even this limited effectiveness.

10. B. — The International Conference on the Long-Term World-Wide Biological Consequences of Nuclear War conclude that the detonation of as little as 100 megatons "could wreak environmental havoc around the world."

The Daily Campus: A never-ending story

It was early in the morning and still dark outside when I noticed the body on the floor.

It had been a long night and I was packing up to head home from typing an English paper at The Daily Campus. My senses were numbed by caffeine, but I still did a double take as my eyes adjusted to the figure slumped by the stairs. The shape began to move.

My eyes adjusted and I realized it was Derek Gray, the managing editor.

"Could you wake me up in fifteen minutes?" he asked. His face was baggy and his eyes bloodshot, but he also seemed to have a certain dignity which weariness could not dim, no matter how silly he looked lying on the floor.

Not waiting for a reply, he fell asleep.

I was not planning to wait around while Derek snoozed away, so I set my watch's alarm for fifteen minutes and left it next to his head. I started walking out, but something forced me to turn back and set the alarm back another ten minutes. So what if Derek walked into class a little late. It looked like he needed the sleep.

Different people deal with hardship in different ways. Dean Orser, The Campus's Deputy Managing Editor, would blow chunks of angry wit as he searched for a headline that was not split. While Derek's stoic silence inspired respect, Dean's fail-safe humor and deadpan delivery won admiration as well as laughter, although his exotic language may have scared away more than one fledgling campus correspondent.

Yes, this is one of those farewell articles for our graduating Campers, but their example of dedication and perseverance transcends the grey walls of 11 Dog Lane and hits a universal truth of man's ability to endure. It is not only the story of two ME's, though.

It is the story of Peter Bryer, a business manager whose economic planning and number-crunching gave The Daily Campus a bold, new direction. If his successors carry through his vision, the Campus will see a radically different era in five years. His handling of both bankbooks and cocktails made him a Daily Campus legend.

It is the story of Joanne Zuzick, who could have left us and gotten some needed rest from her own stint as ME the year before, but the bug was just too strong, and she served out another full year as a features editor.

It is the story of Jill Zuccardy, who as senior writer lent her heart and soul as much as her voice to the paper. I've received many compliments for editorials she wrote. Naturally, I didn't say a word.

It is the story of Patty DeMartino, who took the Mansfield area for every penny of advertising it was worth, but still left plenty of space on the page for the writers' overblown newscopy.

It is the story of resident sage Paul Parker, who could recite every statute of law in effect in Connecticut, much to the chagrin of many administration officials.

It is the story of Traci Meister, that rarest of phenomenons, an editor that never frowned.

It is the story of Dan Dennehy, who not only personally equipped the photo lab, but made the lab a part of The Daily Campus family. Offbeat, upbeat, or downbeat, Dan was always on the beat.

It is the story of Charlie Pickett, whose taste in photo shots was better (thankfully) than his taste in ties. A workaholic in the classic Campus tradition, Charley even tried his hand at newswriting.

It is the story of Joe Erwin, a man of laconic humor and a wry smile uniquely his own. A master with both a four-word headline and a fifteen-thousand word story, he is also unique at The Campus for already having found a real job.

It is the story of Kristen Keheller, the quiet, doughty editor who gave women's sports the voice it deserved at a time when their many accomplishments seemed in danger of neglect.

It is the story of Jennifer Berry, a RA who when not writing up drunk freshmen, offered The Campus her reviews of dance, drama, and whatever else fell under the loose heading of arts.

It is the story of Kim Nauer, who gave both News and Features her special blend of dedication and skill. Check out any Daily Campus of the last two years, and chances are you'll find a story by Kim.

It is the story of Features boss David Sakowski, who developed Husky Talk to the point of rivaling Bloom County in popularity and made Jim Bierlo as much a figure of UConn legend as Fred the Box.

It is the story of the DC's prodigal son, Dave Clark, who covered USG from the wooly days of Marcia Knous to the less hectic times of Kraig St. Pierre, and kept the copy interesting throughout.

It is also the story of a dedicated bunch of proofreaders, typists, advertising representatives, receptionists, maintenance workers, night runners, morning deliverers, and graphics and production staff, and other employees. All have left their individual stamp on this paper, and all will be missed.

Finally, it is the story of Jim Acton, editor in chief and self-appointed crusader against the evil of Friday exams. As much as I can say, I'm sure to fall short of fully depicting the excellence Jim brought to this paper and the inspiration he gave to me.

Jim made a tough job look easy with a professional hand and an ever-present smile, making sure that all those on the staff knew him not only as an authority but as a friend.

I have always had great respect for his handling of tricky situations, where he opted for the human angle before the bureaucratic. But after having gotten a better understanding of his job and responsibilities, my respect for him and his performance this year has increased tremendously.

This year was something of a golden age for The Daily Campus, to a great degree due to the talent we will be losing on this year's graduation day. But I know that the new staff, myself included, will maintain that level of excellence, if only because of the example of ability and fortitude the old crew gave to us.

The two sides of UConn

•From recent editions of The Daily Campus two UConns have emerged: one, a "rising star"—cosmopolitan, sexy, exceptional; the other, a seedbed of misunderstanding, sarcasm and subdued violence.

When I first enrolled in the fall of 1980, UConn was, the experts were certain, a second-rate, "safety school." It has "evolved" now into a first-choice, "Big-East" university.

Back then, as Ronald Reagan was peddling increased defense spending alongside a trimmed and a balanced budget, you could publicly carry a keg to a sporting event or walk through a dormitory quad and get a free beer through a cafeteria window, no questions asked. Fun as all that was, my intent is nonetheless not to say "those were the days." Today it's illegal to drink on campus if you're under 21. As I attempted to pass along Carriage House Road, the scene of a mammoth party on Saturday night, however, beer flowed like milk and honey in the Garden of Eden. So this was UConn, ditifully meeting its obligation to be in America's partying Top Twenty.

It was as if the gates of Carriage House were, for the hundreds of UConnites flocking to and from that event, the Gates of St. Peter. Unquestionably, it was all in good fun, most of it innocent. It would appear, in short, that all is well here at UConn.

I must confess that this scene of confusion and alcohol abuse, a human and automotive traffic jam, seemed to me more like pandemonium than paradise. It amazes me that a major brawl between the Barbell Club and some other group did not erupt. Or that one of the local residents did not call in the National Guard against students for trouncing on their lawns. Or that only one young person was injured in a car accident by the hundreds of drunk drivers on the road.

Hey, wait a minute. We've got Playboy prestige. We've even got models that meet that publication's standards. We've got a 7-foot tall basketball player (recruited over the weekend by President Casteen). We've got MTV.

But before I conclude I'd simply like to point out that images often stem as much from imagination as reality. I would like to thank The Daily Campus for keeping UConn informed of another side of the picture, as much the reality as Alan Hunter's hype or anybody else's.

The library had to be closed at 4 p.m. on Saturday because drunken Spring Weekenders were coming in. One of them fell three stories, receiving a severe concussion and thankfully, the rest of his life. Page Three in Monday's paper, "A Study in Vandalism," gave us a slap in the face, or should have. Although most people have nothing to do with it, UConn's 180 cases of vandalism at a cost of $100,000 to $200,000 since September reflect something about our times.

Far worse was a sub-theme, reaffirmed by Tuesday's informative article on racism at UConn. For one "embattled resident assistant" in Middlesex Hall, a Vietnamese, life at UConn is not the version of roaring good times that MTV and Playboy portray. These organizations could and certainly would care less about UConn if there weren't so much money to be made here.

And so we come to find that not just South Africa, not just Germany in the 1930s and 40s, not just the Deep South, but also the University of Connecticut-Storrs is susceptible to the disease of racism. Its symptoms surface in bathroom stalls, on the lips of students in search of acceptance, before the so-called "minority" even fills out the job application. "Most of the time it is subtle," Artie Travis tells us. Subtle or not, will we ignore it because it is so ugly?

Finally, Edmund Smith's sarcastic letter of May 5 revealed yet another type of tragic misunderstanding, this time concerning organized religion and that which, for all its past wrongs, it brings to people today. i.e., togetherness, consideration of others, and love. The Bible, written thousands of years ago is hardly to blame for most of those killings. People are.

Mr. Smith's defense of science was reasonable. Who will deny that it has done wonders? Still, I'd like to note that our world, the one that science has made, reeks in more ways than one — with its proliferation of chemical and nuclear dumps and weapons; with its mass starvation alongside a handful of productive but gluttonous and wasteful nations; and with its social injustice and severe, pitiful lack of understanding among peoples.

A university, it can be said, is a microcosm of the larger world. Does this university teach us what our world is really all about, or does it pat us on the back, letting us off the "hook" of social awareness as we proceed on our way to that American Dream in the sky?

Steve Boehm

Vandalism our major problem

•As a student leader, I've recently been evaluating the year and my experiences within the UConn community. What I've noticed has been quite disheartening. Along with many administrators and fellow students, I'm deeply concerned with campus spirit and pride. The lack of respect and increasing apathy is an issue which needs to be addressed.

As a student of one of the top state universities in the country, it seems that one would have admiration for their alma mater. Why not UConn? I apologize for generalizing, but there's something lacking here on campus.

One of the gravest concerns I have is vandalism and the maintenance of residence halls. The recent damage done on Middlesex 2nd was appalling and highly uncalled for, and the sad part of it all is that that dorm is not isolated.

The University wastes thousands of dollars on vandalism each year, money that could be used to advance renovation and development on campus. As we progress through our college years, our education is all-encompassing: our studies are only part of what we learn here: we're also supposed to develop emotionally, establishing purpose and integrity.

As college students, we're freer now then we'll ever be in our lives, with only one main responsibility: to grow and learn. This freedom is not a free pass to destruction and selfishness, nor unbridled hedonism.

Recently, I attended a meeting concerning the vandalism in the graveyard on North Eagleville Road. On this private property, there were over 25 tombstones damaged. This is what I mean by lack of respect.

Classes are also a problem. An incident occurred in one of my large lecture halls recently where a student was rude and threatening to a teacher when confronted for talking in class. The atmosphere was extremely tense, it was as if the teacher had to reprimand a behavior-problemed 8th grader.

I feel as if I speak for a majority of the student body in saying that we have alot going for us here at UConn. The university has an exceptional academic reputation and high standards for excellence.

A fear that should concern all students is the reputation which we create. I don't want to graduate from this institution and apply for a job only to hear snide remarks about our notorious reputation as "Playboy Party School." Our social life is an asset here, yet it should not be abused.

Many students volunteer a great deal of their time to improve campus climate, and are often disappointed by the lack of awareness and increasing apathy. It's time to prioritize our activities and concerns. UConn is your home and your foundation, what you do to damage the school only damages yourself and others.

We should have admiration for our school and leave the future UConn students with high expectations, not apprehension.

Pet tips

If you cannot take your pet home:

1.) Please do not leave it shut in your room, where it may starve before it is found.

2.) Don't simply turn it out to fend for itself.

An animal brought up to be your pet can't suddenly stop looking to people for food, and learn to hunt; it will keep searching for you until it dies of hunger and exposure, or gets killed on the road.

For advice and possible adoption of pets, call NECTAR (456-2332 day, 423-0849 evening).

Mansfield Dog Pound (487-0137)

—will take dogs (not cats) and keep them for ten days at least while the warden looks for a new owner.

Newington Humane Society (666-3337)

—will accept both cats and dogs and try to find homes for them (no charge, donations welcomed.)

Free Advertising

—WILI Radio Station (456-1111) will advertise for five days free.

—The Broadcaster weekly will advertise free (456-4124: weekly deadline is Saturday noontime).

Tips for Travelling with Animals:

Inexpensive cardboard boxes for cats and small puppies can be bought from local vets. Check Veterinarians in the yellow pages. Boxes are useful because:

—unless your pet is used to travelling, it will panic on public transport, or in your car, and create a hazard to itself and you.

Keep your pet in — or let it out only on a leash — for a few hours before you plan to leave. Otherwise you may be delayed searching for it at the last minute.

Don't feed your animal heavily before travelling, but see that it has plenty to drink.

Never leave your animal shut up in a closed car. Temperature in a sunny, unventilated car can reach lethal levels in a few minutes.

Little things mean alot

•Students who disapprove of the vandalism to the second floor of Middlesex dorm described in the May 4 article should remember that they have a responsibility to express that disapproval. If we express disapproval on minor things, it will perhaps keep major things from happening.

For example, how many times have you seen fellow students eating or drinking in the library, a clear violation of a minor but reasonable rule. Yet how many times have you said to that student, "It is against the rules to eat in the library. I can't stop you from doing it, but I want you to know I disapprove."

I know students who have taken that action. I think we all should do it more often. There is an old saying that goes, "Take care of the little things, and the big things will take care of themselves."

Sports dept. lacking

•We are writing in response to the article (May 5) regarding the cancellation of the women's gymnastics team. Most upsetting to the team members was that none of them were notified of the termination prior to reading the front page headline. The administration made no effort to contact any of the members, regardless of the fact that the gymnasts had been continually keeping in touch with members of the committee searching for a decision.

The final decision concerning the fate of the team for the '87 - '88 season was promised to the girls before the end of the first week in March. Despite numerous efforts and many phone calls, the team members were put off for another two months, once again missing the deadline to transfer to another school as happened last year when the decision was postponed for five months.

Before the '85 - '86 season, there was no indication that the gymnastics team had any financial difficulty. Had the gymnasts known that there was even a slight chance of the termination of the program within the near future, many would have gone elsewhere, since all had offers from other schools.

Even after the '85 - '86 season, many of the members received invitations from other universities to participate in their gymnastics programs. Had these members not relied on the administration to reach a decision by the promised date, they would still be competing today.

If the administration had no intentions of following the recommendation of the subcommittee, why put the gymnasts through the same ordeal — getting their hopes up — to once again be shot down. The manner in which the administration went about reviewing the program was very unprofessional and the way in which the gymnasts were treated was extremely unfair.

If any athlete was considering attending UConn, I would advise him to think twice before making a commitment to a university where obviously the athletic department is not willing to make a commitment to the athlete.

Be good or be careful

If Gary Hart really is an avid skirt-chaser, does that mean he's not qualified to be president of the United States.

The answer, obviously, is no. There's nothing in the Constitution or our laws preventing a man from being president simply because he enjoys seeing a variety of pretty faces on the other pillow.

And there is at least one precedent. It's been pretty well documented that John F. Kennedy was a dedicated bedroom athlete before and after his election. And I'm sure historians can point to other presidents who went in for the same form of recreation.

One might even make a case that if a president must have an occasional diversion, womanizing is less time consuming and demanding than many others.

In contrast, sex can be completed in much less time if one doesn't dillydally with a lot of billing and cooing and candlelight and wine. Also, sex seldom leaves one feeling as agitated as a missed two-foot putt does.

And skirt-chasing by a president contributes to far more interesting political biographies. Be honest — as students we all become quickly bored with stories of Lincoln trudging miles to school from his log cabin home, or Washington confessing to chopping down that cherry tree.

Ah, but who could doze while reading about Frank Sinatra doing his patriotic duty by providing harlots for a president? Or those secret Kennedy romps with Marilyn Monroe?

So, if Hart has a quick zipper, as the rumors are now roaring, that doesn't mean he couldn't be an adequate or even a great president, given the opportunity.

But there r another question. If Hart is a womanizer, should he be the Democratic candidate for president?

And the obvious answer to that is, hey, forget it.

It's hard enough for any Democrat to be elected president. But it's almost impossible if someone creates an entirely new bunch of hostile voting blocs. And that's what Hart would be faced with.

There would be the enormous wronged-woman voting bloc, which could take in every female who has been victimized by a here-tonight-gone-tomorrow male person.

There would be the cheated-wife voting bloc, which would include all those women who wonder if George is really working late in the office, putting in Saturday overtime or stopping for a drink with the boys after work.

We might also see the envy bloc, which would be made up of men who take the attitude that if they can't get away with it, or even have the opportunity, why should Hart?

And, of course, there is the traditional moralist bloc which believes that when a man says "I do," it doesn't mean "I do it with any doll who's available."

In the days of Jack Kennedy, those reporters who were in the know about his exploits didn't think it was their job to tattle. They also didn't think blabbing would help them get prized news leaks from his administration.

But that's changed, as the Miami Herald has just demonstrated.

That paper decided to find out if Hart was really the lothario he's said to be. They couldn't plant a reporter under his bed, but they did the next best thing.

They assigned some reporters to follow a young Miami actress they had reason to believe was having a fling with Hart. They rode the same plane to Washington, tailed her to Hart's townhouse, and saw her go out with Hart, apparently to dinner.

They also watched and saw the two of them return to his townhouse. And they didn't see her emerge until the next day.

Hart, whose wife was out of town, says he is acquainted with the woman, but that no hanky-panky took place and that it was a terrible journalistic smear. And maybe he's being truthful . It's always possible that the young woman is a political scholar and flew to Washington just to hear Hart paraphrase some of Kennedy's old slogans.

But people have a way of believing the worst. And I doubt if many will believe that a pretty young actress would fly all the way to Washington just to have a bite to eat and maybe help with a lonesome husband's laundry.

As the old wise crack goes: "Be good. But if you can't be good, be careful."

If Hart's not smart enough to be one or the other, then maybe he's not smart enough for the job he's chasing. He should consider giving up the presidential chase and instead chase... well, whatever else he enjoys chasing.

More professors needed

•As Communication Seience majors at the University of Connecticut, we would like to bring several problems to light. These problems affect many Comsci. students, faculty, and administration.

With the current increases in media technology, advertising expenditures, and emphasis on communication skills, an increasing number of students are majoring in the field of communications. (In fact, one frightening aspect of this problem is that over 500 incoming freshman indicated their intended major to be communications.) According to the Assistant Dean of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Gloria Brine, there is a great interest among students to become business majors.

Because of this demand, there are certain requirements one must attain in order to major in business. Thus, because of the stipulations, many students are turned away. As a result, these students turn to related areas such as economics and communications. This leads to a tremendous overload of communications students, especially since there are not nearly enough faculty to effectively deal with them.

Because of the lack of faculty, there is an insufficient number of sections in courses for the students to take. There are four required courses that Comsci. majors must complete, however, because of the overpopulation of students, there are many eighth-semester seniors who either have trouble getting into these courses, or cannot get them at all. Students are literally forced to beg the professors for classes and over-enrollment cards. (There were 312 students who had to be enrolled into Coms. classes this spring.) A large number of these students hang out at Add/Drop at the commencement of each semester to see if they can somehow "obtain" a class. (You know what we mean...). It is a usual occurrence for a Coms. major to receive a partial or completely blank schedule in the mail.

Theprofessors suffer, as well, because they are forced to teach, in what should be small, intimate classes, a filled, large lecture hall, or a room full of standing students trying to take notes! Also, professors are so bogged down with the extra work that many of the students cannot meet with their specific advisors, or do not even know who they are because of this dilemma.

When students are turned away from the classes, they are told to go to the Dean. Thus far, this has not helped. We found after talking with the acting Dean of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Dr. Frank D. Vasington, that funding and, in a sense, bureaucratic hassles are the major problems. Although Dean Vasington realizes the major problems with a few majors in the school, he has done all he can. Recently, he submitted a budget requesting the need for 14 teachers for the college, and the Board of Higher Education for the state of Connecticut only approved 3! This approval then went to the governor for final approval (still pending).

Vasington says this is because the board has a "formula" in which to determine how needy the school really is. Thus they only look at the "numbers" ($$$$$), oblivious to the fact of how the professor shortage affects we, the students. It seems hard to believe that the state of Connecticut, with the highest per capita income in the country is 47th overall in funding its public university via education. We realize there are other areas the state must address such as welfare, transportation, highways and road etc.... however, we feel the Board of Higher Education should not hold on so tightly to monies that are deservedly ours.

How can these problems be resolved? The correct solution is to hire more faculty, but obviously this option has not been received with much attention. One can only express to the students of communication sciences, as well as other students who are having trouble getting classes, to write their representatives. If many do this, it will persuade the representatives to apply pressure on the Board of Higher Education of this "very prosperous state."

Middlesex R.A. was victimized by paper

•In Kim Nauer's May 4th article on the vandalism and relocation of Middlesex 2nd, the floor's Resident Assistant, Phat Tran, was described as being subjected to harassment, racial prejudice, threats of violence, obscenities, and death threats; debris was thrown at him, an explosive was set off outside his door, and the theme of graffitti and vandalism were focused on him. One would think that Phat Tran, in an attempt to do his job, had been victimized enough.

Yet Ms. Nauer's article allowed the victim to be blamed for his victimization, adding insult to injury.

In the article, those interviewed implied that it was the fault of the victim that he was victimized. Phat was "too strict," "too brittle," "weak of heart," unable to "naturally invite respect." The implication is that in some way the actions of the floor residents were understandable, justified. There is no mention that perhaps the involved residents of Middlesex were unable to naturally show respect, to comply with university policies and regulations, to exhibit racial awareness and acceptance, to be a part of a healthy community and environment in a university residence hall.

Those interviewed for Ms. Nauer's article accused Phat Tran of being "exceedingly strict with certain rules... and exceedingly weak or unfair about enforcing others." The evidence given for this accusation is that an individual who was drunk and threatening Phat and a resident of Middlesex 2nd was stipulated with a disciplinary referral to the Alcohol Education Program, while others who committed similar infractions were relocated.

Had Ms. Nauer interviewed any staff member of the Department of Residential Life about his accusation, who would have learned that disciplinary sanctions such as referrals to the Alcohol Education Program, and relocation of residents from their residence halls, can be given only by Area Coordinators. The role of disciplinarian does not belong to a Resident Assistant, and did not belong to Phat Tran. If there were inconsistencies in the discipline procedures, they are the responsibility of the Area Coordinator.

As a journalist, Ms. Nauer had a responsibility to determine the facts of this situation, rather than to allow her article to blame Phat Tran for disciplinary decisions he has no part in making.

The situation on Middlesex 2nd, and the subsequent relocation of its residents, is a lesson in responsibility. Those students who were unable to abide by the university policies regarding behavior in residence halls were then forced to leave that residence hall. It is not the responsibility of the Resident Assistant in any residence hall to make disciplinary decisions about those behaviors; nor was it Phat Tran's responsibility to be the kind of Resident Assistant who would have instilled respect for policy, authority, and community in the residents of Middlesex 2nd — it is not the responsibility of the Resident Assistant to do the impossible.

Lip-sync review biased

•I remember the time when the only thing that supported Unity was Unity Day sponsored by the AACC during Spring Weekend. Everyone was invited but usually this event was not well-publicized or covered by the Daily Campus.

Now we have Unity Week, which was highly publicized. However, only the main events were covered, such as the concert, MTV coming to campus and Playboy rating UConn as one of the top party schools.

What the Daily Campus did not cover was most of the events sponsored by the AACC and BSA. A few of these events were two free movies "The Color Purple" and "Crocodile Dundee," "The Dating Game" on Friday night, the free concert by the harmony group "Regency" in the Student Union lobby, the Step Show, the all-night free party in ROTC Saturday night, and the band "Starbound's" free concert on Sunday. The only thing the Daily Campus did mention was the Unity Day picnic and lip-sync contest.

The coverage of the lip sync/picnic by the Daily Campus reporter, Sam Mendlestein, was very poor and in bad taste. He spent the first two paragraphs complaining about the food lines and the event starting late. Let me add that no one wrote about Saturday's concerts starting over an hour late because of the sound system. And that we had to pay to get into the concert.

Mr. Mendlestein, the reporter, spent most of his article, four paragraphs out of eleven, discussing one lip sync group that performed to a hard rock song by AC/DC. Who by the way, did not win the contest. I feel this captured the reporter's attention because it was hard rock and the song was performed by the only white group in the program.

This reporter, Sam Mendlestein, gave little to no recognition to the other groups that performed. At the end he stated that "all people should be given a fair chance in everything they do."Which, according to me, had nothing to do with his article. If this reporter felt compelled to give a detailed description of AC/DC and talks about a dog that ran across stage, he should feel just as compelled to spend time to give equal recognition to all the other acts that performed.

By the way, there were five other acts who all performed well. The winner of the event only received a brief description of her act. To be exact, a half a paragraph. I am not biased, the group AC/DC performed just as well as the other groups. I'm glad that this group participated. In fact, I wish that more groups representing different backgrounds and different types of music were involved. This event was established to represent unity, not to be ignored or criticized for lack of participation.

In my opinion, this hard rock group's performance was overpublicized because the reporter, Sam Mendlestein, was biased only to rock and had a white-centered attitude.

Joeleen Elliott

A joint responsibility

•I would like to clarify a point that was made in my recent letter. In particular, the point which Rebecca Blake discussed in her letter on April 30, 1987.

I stated that in the specific instance, degradation and exploitation "is an issue concerning females; therefore females should bear most of the responsibility in dealing with it."

What I had hoped to imply in this statement (perhaps I was not explicit enough) was that since we are dealing here with an issue of primary concern to females, they should be the first individuals among the rest to do something about it.

Also, you will notice that I did not say "All of the responsibility" only "Most of the responsibility." What do I mean here? I mean that there are men (including myself) who are willing to support females in their attempts at achieving equality and fulfillment in society and personal relationships, but females must be willing to initiate any changes in society that they desire and should assume, at first, most of the responsibility for promoting those changes. Motivated by the females, the males should definitely assume equal responsibility for maintaining equality.

It is the responsibility of the females of society to tell us males what they want in personal relationships. It is the responsibility of the females in society to tell us males how to treat them; males are not always able to determine what females want and what they are thinking; therefore, females must communicate their thoughts unmistakably.

I, and many other men of today, are willing to change and grow if we realize that there is a majority of women out there who care enough about themselves and us to want us to change.

I hope I have made myself a little clearer. For now, let everyone put the discussion at rest, and enjoy the rest of the semester.

Christopher A. Milano

A thank you to RAs

•I want to take this opportunity to extend my sincere appreciation for all of your hard work and energy this semester. While Spring semester is always "selection time," this semester has been particularly hectic.

Along with RA Part I and II, there were all Assistant Hall Director and Hall Director selection processes. Your willingness to contribute your time and insights greatly enhanced our ability to select quality candidates!!

Married couples grow similar as years go by

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Married couples become more similar over the years, but wives are more likely to change and even adopt the personality and intellectual abilities of their husbands, according to a study.

"The explanation is that it's a function of the family environment and economic resources available in that particular environment and how successful the man is," said Dr. K. Warner Schaie, a professor of human development at Penn State University.

The average age of the wives in the study ranges from the mid-40s to the 90s. "We have a lot of couples where the husband is the primary breadwinner," Schaie said in an interview.

Men with better jobs are able to create a family environment that is conducive to intellectual growth, including traveling, attending plays and taking adult education classes, he said.

Schaie, who has been administering psychological and intelligence tests to 175 randomly selected couples every seven years, began the project in 1956 while a graduate student at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Schaie predicted the changes will become more symmetrical as women become more responsible for family income. He plans to study the couples again in 1991.

Previous findings show it is a natural tendency for people to seek a partner who is similar in intellect and ability, but would not have predicted a change in the similarities after marriage, Schaie said.

"We see now they start scoring alike on the tests," he said. "Even their math ability increases, or decreases, depending on their spouse."

Spouses tend to quickly adopt each other's personality traits and intellect during the first seven years of marriage, but then level off for another seven- to 14-year period, he said.

As they age and their children leave home, they again become increasingly similar, according to Schaie.

Coincidentally, the couples say they are the happiest with each other in the early years of marriage and after their children leave home, he said. Couples with children report they are less happy when their offspring are small children, he said.

The study can be used as a guideline for couples contemplating marriage, he said.

"The study should reinforce the notion that although you don't necessarily pick someone exactly like you, the likelihood of a marriage lasting is increased by picking someone similar to you," Schaie said. "The marriage is more likely to stay intact."

Over the last 31 years, Schaie, who is also director of Penn State's Gerontology Center, tested 3,000 selected volunteers from the Seattle area on communication and verbal skills, personality traits, reasoning ability, math skills and spatial ability.

The marital similarity study, which is funded by the National Institute on Aging, is part of the Seattle Longitudinal study, which has tracked the mental ability of people as they age.

...Day of Pride

anything, but I'm enjoying UConn." Wells, now a junior,says.

"The prejudice I hear about is through the media, like people finding messages insulting their culture scrawled on their doors," Wells said, referring to an incident two years ago when a black student found "KKK" written on his dormitory door. "I was kind of shocked and appalled to find out about it," Wells said.

"I myself have not encountered any real prejudice. I do detect that there's people who stay away from me, so I don't bother them and they don't bother me.

I just know that there's something about me that they don't like, and the first thing I'm going to think about is the color of my skin, and I go on the defensive. I may be wrong to do so but I feel that many of us blacks will react that way. Most of society has not gone through what most of the blacks or what their ancestors have, so they may not understand the defensive reaction."

For some black students, coming to UConn can involve serious adjustments, especially if they've attended predominantly black high schools.

Some experience culture shock, described by Eleanor Myers, who went to a mostly black high school in New Haven, as a feeling of being lost, of not knowing how to act or where to go for advice.

"I went through a phase of doing whatever I saw everyone else doing so I wouldn't feel like an outcast. I wanted to fit in and I was oversensitive about my color," Myers said.

According to Scott, any minority student will probably go through a period of adjustment. "It's up to places like the Afro-American Cultural Center (AACC), the Puerto Rican Center and the International Center to help ease the adjustment to the university, because this institution is a predominantly white institution," she said.

Wilson came from a high school where most students were white, but she finds that the AACC has been one of the most rewarding aspects of being at UConn. "My involvement with the AACC has been my best experience here at the university," she said. "It gave me something to identify with as a black person and it made me really want to learn more about blacks, because, coming from a mainly white high school, I was cut off from learning about the black experience."

The Black Student Association is also now working more closely with the Student Union Board of Governors and by co-sponsoring and helping organize events, such as the campus visit by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the group is gaining more recognition.

As a result, other minority organizations, such as the West Indian Awareness Organization, are also becoming more visible.

All the groups work to improve the quality of life for minority students at UConn which, in turn, helps improve the retention rate.

Three O'Clock
(IRS)

College radio plays progressive music to help bands get their start, and Three O'Clock could very well be one of the best reasons for avoiding popular format.

This quartet is best compared to The Alarm, but holds a softer sound. The abilities of the two bands are a close match, but Three O'Clock are by no means imitators. The comparable sound and abilities are a definite plus for the band, whose sound comes out well on this vinyl release.
Rating-8

Raven
Life's A Bitch
(Atlantic)

Raven's the type of band that inspires the listener to stand up and stop getting knocked down, even if their methods are a bit straightforward (like on "Pick Your Window").

The music is heavy without being thrashy, so there is strong evidence of musical talent. The talent they posess does a 70/30 percent split for music/lyrics, hurting the non-instrumental aspect of the songs.
Rating-5

The Saints
All Fools Day
(TVT)

Progressive/rock at its finest.

Much hype has followed this band, both from publicity directors and journalists, and The Saints have lived up to it all. From the rousing tracks that sweep the album, to its beautifully melodic final cut (the album's title track "All Fools Day"), this Australian band's latest LP is a pleasurable pick.
Rating-8

TNT
Tell No Tales
(Mercury)

Said to have grown up since their earlier days, TNT is using this album to prove to the world that their musical talents are being unjustly hidden.

Tell No Tales was named after the first song written for the album - a pulse-pounding song with blazing guitar rifs that totally offset the rest of the LP. This track proves their power, while tunes like "10,000 Lovers (In One)" back up their "have we got something for you" boasts. Some tracks are supported with incredible vocal harmonies, totally throwing off listeners' prejudged expectations.
Rating-7

Jon Butcher
Wishes
(Capitol)

The two airwave releases from this album have given it the religious label. The songs are actually more of a cry to change the world situation, and lead the listener through battling endeavors such as "Holy War" and "Long Way Home".

The album's two sides could each be put on EP's and given different reviews. Side one concentrates on more religious tendancies, and comes out as a side full of one song with changing lyrics ("Goodbye Saving Grace" and "Living for Tomorrow" are identical tunes). Side two, however, gives a much better impression of what Butcher and his band are capable of (especially on "Angel Dressed in Blue"), and expands to topics such as love, loneliness, and freedom.

NE1
Illusion
(Vector)

NE1 (anyone) is a very appropriate name for this trio. Their music sounds generically familiar when compared to the current radio new wave trends. The lyrics are nicely compiled poetry, but the music does nothing to excite the listener. This one is strictly for those who thrive on radio-oriented (and danceable) new music.
Rating-5

Thrashing Doves
Bedrock Vice
(A&M)

Names can be misleading, but in this case, it couldn't be more fitting. Thrashing Doves combines the abstract and sometimes harsh lyrics of punk rock and backs it with flowing, casual melodies. Following the songs with the lyrics sheet is definitely a unique experience.

Save Your Prayers
(Capitol)

The first listen to this without paying it much attention could be a big mistake. When paid some attention, Save Your Prayers is easily recognized as a rock album to be reckoned with.

Those who remember what real rock was like will readily appreciate the dynamic efforts this quartet have poured into this LP. Lyrics with meanings, songs with heart, and music with power all come out on Save Your Prayers.

Steve Earl & The Dukes
Exit 0
(MCA)

Not strictly down-home country, Steve Earl & The Dukes filled the tracks on this album with with a more wholesome guitar-oriented type of country music. The songs seem generic to those not geared towards it, but the skills of the musicians are undoubtedly strong, and country fans who like a more lively mix in their music will find this album (and the excellent guitarwork on it) highly appreciable.

Star of stage and screen tells of an actor's life

By Annie Swanson
Special to The Daily Campus

"I just try to get to work." This seems to be the proverbial actors' statement, but this time the words are from actor/producer Griffin Dunne, and they seem almost amusing because Mr. Dunne is busier than ever. While pursuing his acting career in such films as "An American Werewolf in London"; "Johnny Dangerously"; "Almost You"; "After Hours"; and due out in August, "Who's That Girl?", Dunne is involved equally, if not more, in producing.

Dunne and partner Amy Robinson make up New York based Double Play Productions, and in August embark on their fourth film project. Based on the producers' original story idea, written by Naomi Foner and directed by Sidney Lumet, the film is about a sixties family living in the radical underground. "The parents blow up a napalm factory and it's about the breakup of the family," says Dunne.

Before Double Play Productions there was Triple Play. "Chilly Scenes of Winter" was co-produced with Mark Metcalf and based on the novel by Ann Beattie. Released in 1979 as "Head Over Heels," it was re-released by UA Classics in 1982 with the original title. The following year Double Play produced John Sayles' "Baby It's You," starring Rosanna Arquette. In 1985 Dunne starred in the Double Play production of "After Hours." The film's budget was four million dollars — financed through a bank loan — and has grossed $10,272,890 theatrically.

D.C.: "What appealed to you about Ann Beattie's 'Chilly Scenes of Winter'? I assume both you and Amy read the book and liked it."

G.D.: "We liked that book because the characters reminded us of ourselves. I think that most people have had that kind of a relationship before when you can't get past the obsession, the idea of the person, instead of seeing who that person really is."

"I think that most people have had that kind of a relationship before when you can't get past the obsession, the idea of the person, instead of seeing who that person really is."

— Griffin Dunne

D.C.: "So you, Amy and Mark found her up in Cambridge and asked her for the movie rights?"

G.D.: "That's right. When we met her she said it was as if three of her characters had walked into her living room."

Ann Beattie is not the type to let just any Joe off the street make a movie based on one of her books. God knows some other producer could have cast Pia Zadora as Laura. Ann Beattie is no dummy. Remember, Ann Beattie went to UConn and dedicted "Falling in Place" to our own J.D. O'Hara.

D.C.: "Can you tell me a little about the day that Griffin, Amy and Mark came up to Cambridge? And why you gave them the movie rights to your book?"

A.B.: "We were all very open with each other. I think I knew almost immediately that these three people really understood the story and could make the film. As it turned out, Joan Micklin Silver wrote an excellent screenplay."

D.C.: "Griffin told me that the one stipulation you had was that you play a waitress with a beehive hairdo."

A.B.: "I begged them to let me."

Griffin Dunne on the Beehive hairdo: "they seem to be a recurring theme in our movies. We find them terrifying."

D.C.: "It seems as if you identified with Paul Hakett in "After Hours."

G.D.: "We personalize a lot of the characters in all of the movies we make in that we have to like them, or identify with them on some level. I certainly related to Paul Hakett. I've lived in New York; I've certainly dated strange women, and I've been in... not that exact night, thank God, but some very similar bad evenings. There are times when it should be relatively easy to get from one place to another and it's just not. You know what I mean?

D.C.: "'After Hours' was written by a Columbia student. Was it just luck that it found its way to Double Play?"

G.D.: "Joe Minion wrote it and gave it to Dusan Makavejev, who gave it to Amy, who gave it to me. It certainly was luck that the three of them were at Sundance

Debbie, Stowe C 3rd floor: Well, it has been a great year, d----t! I want to thank you for being the greatest roomie in the world! You are a very special person and you deserve THE BEST! I'm sure the world of P.T. is going to be glad they have you! I'm going to miss ya a lot! Good luck. Love, Your d----t roomie

Stan (the waiter in Wheeler A): It's too bad you're leaving. Wish there was more time for us to get to know each other! Secret Admirer

Hey Jimbo
Happy 19th
Rod Carew's Daughter
(sorry no present)

Rich, You went to college and had a wild time; then you met a girl, settled down, and got a job?! But you've got two years before I make you dust, so you're not old yet. Congratulations, I Love You. Brenda

Donna (Beard B), What can I say? We've shared so many special times. I am forever grateful for all the patience and love you've shown me. Donna, you are a beautiful person. I was gonna say how lucky I am to have met you, but then again, it's not luck that created our friendship. Let's facer it- We just have GOOD TASTE. Alwasys remember that I LLove You. Love, Inga

JENNIFER (MERRITT A) Four years over??! My sister the graduate--- Congratulationss, I'll miss not having you around on campus. Your a great sister! Love you lots, Lorelea

Jennifer, "Jeffiner", "Mom", We're finally graduating !!! Here is to four years of college!! And to four years of friendship! Here's to us!!! Love, San

My Babyblue, We're missing Joan Jett, fine wines, too much "Jagger", where's Laurie and the Boston Guito? It's in the R.O.T.C., the impossible squeeze, Earth Wind and Byron, our couch at Cosgrove, $9.75 saus- x-tra cheese pizzas, "almost perfect" drive back south, yeah! We'll have some of that stuff, Pepsi and orange C.C.'s, ooh baby! Pass-out city, -Rach- I had the best time with you last weekend. Love, Joe

ANNIE, THANKS! LOVE, LENA

Lori,
I hope I've properly prepared you for your last two (three?) years here. You'll do fine on your own. But I know I'll miss the great times we've had together. From our first dance at Thumpers (do we dare tell anyone) to tennis at Towers. Everything we've done together has been special. Now with the summer approaching, we can look foward to more special times. Just remember, wherever I wind up next year, we'll always be together. Nothing can change that. I Love You. Jim

Sori of Pete (Yes, this means you Scroggface): Thanks for a great last semester. Here's to a great summer and to Q-matches at the Civic Pub. Remember, I can drink a lot, etc... Love, Annie

Melissa and Karen(Wheeler 2nd): Always remember, Ooh, Ooh Bahamas, Newark Sure, leave me behind, that's ok! Best wishes in your new job and your days away from UConn! Congrats! Bye roomie. Love, Lisa

Lisa C- One semester left. Can you believe it, four years together and we're still speaking. Hope you won't be the dorm ghost next semester. Hope I won't be such a bookworm. Love, Shaunna

Colleen and Andra, A year to remember. Hackie, punk postcards, Noah, Mossette, Margaritaville, Muffler, MMMax, "Sketch Me Now", Concerts... Concerts... Concerts... The Furs, General Public, U2 (twice, aren't we special), "Hunks of the Week", "between the sheets", Moonlighting, and pranks. Where will those underwear men turn up next? Thanks for the fun and the friendship. I'm going to miss you. Save me a trip to Europe. Love, Shaunna

Michael- It's been a great year but I'm glad it's over! We've got more exciting times ahead!! Who ever would have thought I'd be graduating with the man I'm marrying! Eagerly awaiting Oct. 3rd... Forever, Lisa

Debbie: Whose your best friend? Get psyched for Europe! Congrads on Graduation. Thanks for always listening! Love, Alicia

French B: Mary, Ann, Brenda, Kathy, and Jenn: Good luck and have fun next year! Let's keep in touch! Love, Jodi

Rean- To one fantastic year. Thanks for always being there and for the great times we've had. Friends like you are forever. You deserve the best! Love, Rhonda

Laura: Already 4 years have past. Do you believe it? We've had some real good times together. I can't believe your graduating! Airport, Jay, "The Love Boat", The Pub, Bahama Mamas, Huskies, and U2. Lisa

To my big brother, Lisa,Suprise! Just wishing you the best of luck in the future. See you in Cape Cod. You little brother

Adam, Congratulations to the most considerate, understanding, happiest, craziest, funniest, laughingest, generous, kindest, out of control, partying, roommate a guy could ever have had Paola and Rose: We can't believe it's over. No longer will we be blessed with your presence. We'll miss you!! Love, Sue and Ruth

JOMACA: CONGRATS! THESE PAST 4 YEARS WENT SO FAST- BUT I'M GLAD I WAS HERE FOR ALMOST 3 OF THEM! I KNOW YOU'LL ALWAYS DO WELL, BUT WHAT WILL I DO WITHOUT YOU?! LOVE YOUR SIS, RUPIE

LEO, you mean more to me than words can say... each and every day... Thanks for being my BEST friend and so much more. Though my arms may be empty this summer, my heart will always have you. I Love You, Lisa

BRENDA JEAN: A WISH FOR SUCCESS AS YOU ENTER THE REAL WORLD (NOW WE'RE EVEN. FROM THE GUY WITH TIGHT JEANS)

ASIF & JAVED: GOOD LUCK AT MIT! CALL ME IF YOU EVER NEED ANY HELP! CAN IT BE ANY TOUGHER THAN UCONN? GORDON

TOWERS

Rina,
"Crystallize" your dreams in Rome. I'll miss our starry ceiling and long talks. Hope your brother's memory is short!
Love, Lain

MICHAEL,
Thanks for all the good times. "I'm crazy for you." Love you always!
LOVE, DAWN

Alright Suzanne, here's your BLUE personal. Now that I've spent $2 you know you won't get a graduation gift. What else can I say but GOOD LUCK. Love always, your bestess roommate.

To my favorite Senior: Congratulations on your graduation. You'll be the best Advertising Copywriter in the business. Thanks for all the help you've given me this semester. You've made it alot easier, not to mention much happier! It's been an outrageous two months. The best is yet to come...XXOO CJ

MARTINA, What am I going to do without you for the next two years? You have to admit, we've done some crazy things, but the most outrageous is yet to come. GET PSYCHED FOR THE ROAD TRIP!! Good luck in Texas -- I'm gonna miss ya. Love, Deb.

Paula, If you read this you know we love you. It's been a tough semester but you are still strong. I hope things get better for you. I'll write!
Love, Lena

Pudge with a "p" and Lesbo - How does it feel to finally be "outta here?!?!" Thanx for all the GREAT memories: extended happy hours, you're shlacking off, late night talks, what should I wear?, and we can't forget that Sherman smile. You guys are the best. Good luck. Love, "Sweet" Joan.

Yo, Cruella, Happy 21. A tad bit early. If ya go to Toad's without me, I'll rearrange ya Face Martitia. P.S. Boris says, Hi!

To Donna of Hamilton 4th, the best roommate and great friend. I couldn't have asked for any better. Thanks for the past 2 years! It's been great. I will miss you! Love ya, Christine

Donna, Congratulations to a good friend. I will miss having you around next year. Make sure you visit often. Good luck in the real world. Colleen

SEAN OF HAMILTON AND WATERBURY. BE COOL CAT AND GOOD LUCK. I'LL MISS YOU! RITA P.S. LONG LIVE RED SWEATERS!

Lisa S, Keller House. Congratulations Graduate! We're now REAL teachers! You are such a special friend whose always ready to help with a kind word, and you deserve all the best things in life! Good luck always and I know we'll keep in touch. Love, Linda Basia, I would like to wish you the best of luck for the future. You and Spikey more two of the first people I met when I came here. I will miss you, Love Van.

Dave and Jim, Third floor won't be the same without you two. You guys are like the older brothers I never had. Congratulations and Good Luck but not goodbye. See you at Thumper's TOM (bone)

Andrea, Good luck on your last semester. It will be harder to be a pain in your neck if you move away. Of course there's always visits. Love, Tom Andrea a.k.a. "Shorty" (by me at least) Good luck with your Urban Semester next semester. I am looking forward to another attempt at buying a beer at Fitz Willy's this summer with you. Love Vincas.

My Frannie, Best wishes for you on your graduation. It has been a really "CRAZY" semester. At some times crazyer than others. Good luck in the future but not goodbye. Lov, hugs and kisses, your Vincai

Laura, I hope this isn't goodbye because you are graduating. I have somewhat enjoyed getting reemed during finals week the past few semesters and again this semester, I'm sure. Love, Vin

To my (other) roommate Frannie. Congratulations you're finally out of here. Thanks for being understanding of me. Good Luck. Love your (other) roommate Tom

KARZN THANKS FOR BEING SUCH A GREAT ROMMATE! I'LL NEVER FORGET ALL THE FUN WE HAD THIS SEMESTER. GOOD LUCK NEXT SEMESTER, SMA! LOVE, MICK

This is the end

WEST

Michelle, Congratulations on your graduation. We hope that we will never have the pleasure of doing business with you in the future. Love Tom and Vin

To Klute—We've had an awesome semester with two more to go. Don't forget Zeta Psi, Huskies or Mansfield Hollow. I'll come visit at the Cape. We still have one more Tuesday night at Huskies with 4 pitchers and jokes. Remember—you can lean on me.
Luv ya kid- Marie

Nancy, "Sex Machine" Congratulations on your graduation and good luck because you are going to need it. Just kidding. Love Vin and Tom

Kim, Happy 20th Birthday. How does it feel to no longer be a teenager. Now your a responsible adult. Right?! Have fun in Europe and try not to party too much. Your roommate, Kristine

Laura, I can't believe I've spent the past 4 years hanging around with you - what a reputation you've given me. Actually, I can't imagine what it would've been like without you. I've had a lot of great times thanks to you and I know there will be many more. Don't be nervous about the real world - it will just be another thing for you to be paranoid about. Love, Mary

VITA Happy 19th! Have a blast! Today you have an excuse to be wild. Hurry up, only one week left and four more fraternity signitures to go. It has been the bestest year. Love always, Di and Lieb

Dear Les, I just want to thank you very much for making UCONN life tolerable. You are the best friend anyone could ever want! I love you very much. Congratulations on graduating. Be good - Tim.

To: Gretchen, Amy, Brian, Lynn, Erik, Dave and Kim, Thanks for making my 21st so special. . . .Mahendra. P.S. To Maureen and the crew, you guys will have your job next semester, even though you didn't send me a personal!!

Judy—Congrats! Thanks for a wonderful semester. You've been a fabulous roommate and good friend. "How about them Whalers?" "Would you like a sip?" I'll miss you. Love, Donna

Kristy, You're such a pal! (and a best friend) I'll miss you! Love, Andrea

Nancy, time flies when you're having too much fun! Soon we'll be married with ten kids. . .I know we sometimes have disagreements but you've been a great roommate and friend. Good Luck! See you in Hartford! Love, Andrea Mark, even though you're a pain I'm going to miss you. Congratulations! Love Ya! Teri.

Tony,
Congratulations! You're a terrific guy and a great friend, I'm going to miss you most of all. Come visit - I will always be here for you.
I LOVE YOU !!!
Teri
P.S. feel free to send roses anytime, you know where I'll be.

Dave and Jim—Just wishing you the best of luck on Saturday! (and always!) Of course it will fly! I'm going to miss you guys! Congratulations! Love, your Shakespearean spy, Tammy.

Scott—I still don't know how to say it, but nothing's wrong - - - -Love, Tamara

Jimbo & Dave (Troy),
I finally get to know you and look what you did—you had to go and graduate. Good luck on Saturday. When you get rich, come visit, no sooner. Congratulations!
Love, Kim (Shakespeare)

Diane,
Thanks for a great semester even though I can't keep my drawers shut. The red carpet's out for you when you come visit (as promised). Congratulations & Best of Luck. Love, Kim

Anthony
They finally figured out a way to get you out of here. Congratulations!! It's gonna be strange not having you around here to nag us. Who's gonna take me out to dinner NOW? I don't have to tell you how much I'm going to miss you—you already know. HAVE FUN BEING A BUM, you earned it!
I love you,
Kim.
P.S. If you don't come visit, we'll find you AND kill you!

and possibly the BEST semester.
Thank you for being my friend
You'll be greatly missed.
With much love, affection and admirations,
KARZY

Michelle,
Fortune was smiling upon us when they put us together as roommates. I had A BLAST. GOOD LUCK AND I LOVE YOU. LOVE, KARIN

Mary, Hey, How ya doing? I guess that no longer applies since college is over. Here's to four long hard years! I hope the real world isn't as stressful as the past few weeks have been. We made it! (All that worrying for nothing!) Now we can really start partying. Just two questions: When do we leave for Boston, and what island are we going to next year?! Love, Lori

Mickey, How ya doin? Thanks for all your 20 advice. Its appreciated. Love, Jodi P.S. Your friends in Lancaster are the best I'll miss everybody

Russ, why are you graduating so soon after we got to know (and love) you?! - When you come to visit us OFTEN next year we have to make Oscar's a tradition GOOD LUCK! Love, Kathy and Kim

Basia, Hey. . .Hi! I have to hand it to you - you managed to live with me without going crazy. What do we do now? No more relaxing - I'll flip you (I don't mean literally, because we both know I can't lift you!) for the couch. Thanks for carrying me home on those nights I wasn't carrying you! Thanks to you I toughened up - being a sap was such a drag! Love, Laura. P.S. You're as important to me as my umbrella

Michelle, You've been marvelous. Thanks for being so supportive all these years! Andy P.S. Hi Karen! You both are indeed quite awesome!

CONGRATULATIONS TO:ALL THE VOICES. WINNER OF THE 1987 UCONN BATTLE OF THE BANDS

TO THE GIRL AT 7:00 MASS SUNDAY EVENING WITH SHORT LIGHT BROWN HAIR WHO WOULD NOT TAKE MY SEAT AND HAD TO STAND ALL MASS. I'D REALLY LIKE TO GET TO KNOW YOU, POSSIBLY OVER DINNER. MEET ME SAME PLACE, SAME TIME NEXT WEEK IF INTERESTED

To the guy who "picked me up" in the red Hawaiian shirt. If you're referring to the blonde who you shared pretzels with, I'll be at Ted's Happy Hour Friday at 4:00 if you'd like to meet me. If you can't get in, meet me outside at 5:00. Wear your shirt.

I've been wasting my time
I am losing my mind
My head's on the floor
Forever more
I have given you all
All that I had
With a slam of the door
you've driven me mad
Now I'm sayin'
Tell me what you want

To all who pledged to get the out-going Sports Editor at the banquet (and you know who you are)- I'm sharpening my teeth! P.S. I'm thinking about it Patty

Time to get out

GENERAL

TO PETER, PATTY, JOE, AND JIM: YIKES... WHAT IS THERE LEFT TO SAY THAT WE HAVEN'T ALREADY SAID OR DONE THIS PAST YEAR?? WE'LL MISS YOU AT HAPPY HOUR NEXT YEAR... SORT OF!! GOOD LUCK TO THOSE OF YOU WHO WILL ACTUALLY GRADUATE THIS YEAR, AND FOR THAT QUESTIONABLE ONE, MCDONALD'S DRIVE-THRU HAS A MANAGEMENT POSITION AVAILABLE. SO JUST REMEMBER IF SOMEWHERE, SOMEHOW, SOMEONE COMES UP TO YOU AND SAYS, "MINDY'S HERE"... RUN FOR COVER. WE'LL MISS YOU GUYS!!! DON'T FORGET US PEE-ONS THAT MADE YOU WHAT YOU ARE TODAY!!! LOVE (FOR A PRICE)- MARY AND CINDY

Cindy and Mary (AKA Mindy): Things I don't like: Buicks, Bandaids, BEAP, Boardwalk, Barney, brokenglass, broken bones, Captain Morgan, headlocks, poof-poofs, 190's, and the real world. Things I like: sleeping, happy hours,racquetball, skiing, Vermont, shovelling, 190's, driving Hondas, The DC, Volleyball (especially Team A), New Year's Eve, New Jersey, headlocks, Christmas, Tequila, M&M's, Salsa, Nachos, Bobby V's and BT's, Michelob, Gils, kittens, Susie the cat, personals. Things I love: Cindy and Mary. Signed with respect, Peter Boo Boo BM Morton Grace.

TO OUR FAVORITE RETIRED SPORTS EDITOR: HEY! WHAT WOULD A GRADUATION BE WITHOUT A PERSONAL FROM YOUR FAVORITE CO-WORKER, MINDY??? FOR YOUR SAKE , WE HOPE THEY HAVE SHAVED STEAK WHERE EVER YOU ARE GOING! REMEMBER YOUR GOAL FOR THE BANQUET... ANALLY YOURS, INDY AND M

To those who attempted to teach a clumsy Sports Editor winter sports. Sorry I wasted your time

Mike (The Bol)- Just remember, now YOU ARE THE DAILY CAMPUS, no matter what anyone says

Well Pumpkin- It's almost that time when we have to take down the festive lights, pack away the action couch, re-read the "Horrorscopes", and prepare to walk "...into the arms of America.." or into a souvenir shop for a fig-newton, fireball, and Matzo party!! Who said that? Perhaps, maybe, oh I don't know... 'SATAN!" Well- isn't that special?! HUH! HUH! ..."OH MY GOD"... I'm going to miss you! Thanks for just being you and for a great year!! What?... HUH... Love Nicole

Andrew, just wanted to let you know that I'm really glad I met you. You're a great guy and I hope you get everything you want always. Love, Dora

This is to Cindy: Got a match?
I never enjoyed being mocked so much as i did by you. I don't want the year to end and I want my job back. But if anyone should have it, You should. I missed you last weekend and I'll miss you next year, But I look forward to the summer. I'll see you and Gumby tomorrow night at the banquet. (I wish I had asked you first,) I love you. Peter. (Dean, get lost.)

Dave- Ellsworth 8th- It's a good thing I met Kevin because then I got to meet you too! Besides, where would you be in HDFR without me? Remember you still owe me a drink so even if you graduate, we'll still have to get together this summer. Best of luck Dave- The Business World had better watch out- Joanne (alias Watson)

EAGLEBEAK... We've had our rough times, but we survived. Thank you for the happiest times and for all your love and support. I'm so glad we met. ILY! Get ready for a great summer! BLOCKHEAD

To the Bushwalker: These past few weeks have been interesting. Glad I met you. Stay away from rosebushes, they could be painful. -Key Jimbo (I thought I'd carrry on my tradition of name-calling the Acct. Dept. Heads) I just wanted you to know I'm going to miss you! Thanks for being the great guy you are- wish you all the best! Luv, The Little Indian "Spaz"

NATE!!

The management at Jonathan's would like to thank its graduating seniors for their dedicated service. We'd like to wish you all the best of luck in the future

I LOVE YOU CHARLIE BROWN! ALWAYS, ALL WAYS, LUCY

To the insecure, rude guy driving out of South Campus around 6:30 on Saturday. What you said to my girlfriend left me totally shocked, and speechless, but I think I would like to talk to you about it as soon as possible. P.S. Did you ever think that the reason you're on the loose is because nobody wants you? Please respond

Joe- Congratulations. Hope all goes well for you! Please remember the good times. Take Germany by storm!! Enjoy. Take care, Linda

A special THANKS going to all the special people who helped make the 1987 Cystic Fibrosis Fun-Run-Relay A SUCCESS! Chairperosons: Lois, Danielle, Christine, Clare, Mary, and Melinda, the 19 teams who participated in the run, the volunteers, and the local business who supported the run

To my Ad Production Staff (Jen, Dana, Mo, Andi, Karen, Andrew, William, Ed, Julie, Chris, and Lee)- Thanks for all of your help this semester. YOu guys are terrific! Karen and Patty- special thanks. Dora P.S. Good luck next year Andrew

TO THE MISSION CLUB: I'VE BEEN WAITIN FOR SO LONG, OH BOY! OH BOY!! WOOF, LATE NIGHT MISSIONS BABY POWDER, ITCHING POWDER, ERT, SWITZERLAND, SAVE WOODY!! CRYPTON MOONNIICCA N.Y. WHERE? CAT CLUB LIQUOR CONTROL 21ST CAMPUS SIGNS, PICKLES, ORANGES, YOU

Dearest Emilio: It's time to close a chapter in the book of life, but it is only why the introduction to what lies ahead for us. Congratulations on graduating and may you see nothing but sucess in Law School and in life. I'm looking foward to a future of happiness with you!! I LOVE YOU.. As always, Tua Bambola XXX

MORF- Well kitten, all I can say is.. You're so beautiful! I've never become sooo close to someone in only 2 yrs. Through all the good and bad times, you've been there: Pitchers at Ted's, breaking noses, toasting ourselves, stealing pens and food, Toad's, PDA QUEENS, and the like! This isn't the end, it's a new beginning! Remember, you're always a success if you're happy and smiling! I LOVE YOU! Your favorite Mellow Burnout!! Congratulations!

Debbie, Kathy, Robin, Dan: It's been such a pleasure working with you. May life give you the best, Audrey

To the Husky Baseball Team: Good luck in the Big East Tournament. I know you will come out on top. But no matter what the outcome, you guys are all winners. Bols

NAY- HI- (BAY)

Jenny, Jenny! I feel bad! From BAY P.S. Kate is great

Luny June, Well I owe the successful completion of my first year at UConn to you and all you've done for me. I couldn't have gotton this far without you. I just want to say thanks and I Love You. CJG P.S. Remember: Microbes are are ubiquitous and to keep those artificial hips on! Good Luck! Congratulations

Donna: There are no words to describe how much fun I've had in the last five years. I'll never forget our Knots Landing parties or going to Great Oaks to meet John. A lot of people have made these past years the best time fo my life- from Sandy and Barb, to Wendy and Elyse (with a little bit of Gersh thrown in for excitement!) But none of them have shared as much as we have. Don't miss me too much next semester, I'll be back to visit. Thanks for the cyclops jokes that made me laugh till I cried, the notes from the Warrens, and especially for the wake up song! Love, Dar

Jill- What a semester! We'll have to get together in the summer for White Russians and lots of "ends". Can't wait for next semester (Remember-there are 2 strict rules in the house). Love, N (Blotch)

Mike (Stoney), Thank you for all of your help and kindness this past weekend. I really appreciate it. You friend always! Denise

DANAE, Suprise! You sweet thing. I just wanted to thank you for a truly Unforgettable Birthday Celebration. I guess I owe you one. - Love, John Richie, Thanks for all the good times you've shown me these past 2 years. I can't wait till this summer because there are many more to come. I'll miss you next year! Love always, Your P.S.

Jeff, My love for you feels like a dream. When I awake from this sweet dream. I hope to find myself in your arms so that I may know our love for each other is a reality. "Stanley"

G & J: Good luck in N.M. I'll miss ya! Love, Dolds

Valerie: Thanks for a great year as my roommate. Next year will even be better. Good luck on exams and have a great summer! Love, Rebecca

Vita- I can't believe you're 19 now! I still love you though! Live it up kid- it doesn't last too long! Good luck on exams! Love, JodiBeth watching tv and ice cream - yummy.

Jungle runs were such a thrill,
but even better was Becca Hill.
Doesn't matter if you're near or far,
There's nobody like Booty Buhrman for OTR.
Those Playgirl pearl necklaces - watch out for those beads,
Where's my laundry, we're taking bets,
Shall we? Surely! Let's.
He razzes your jazz, you're warm for his form, get him drunk and bring him back to the dorm.
Mother door wars and devious deeds.
Burn your roommate's rug and then feel bad,
"Look-at-it" - Ohh, how sad.
Buying food that's overpriced, renting Grease and Partygeist.
Com'on guys, it's Thursday night,
peace and serenity are in the light.
On weekends we said, "Where's the party?"
At dinner we said, "Where's Dairy Marty.?"
Face it, this year was so much fun, hand me the slammer marked "number one!"

#12 on the football team – I have an intense crush on you.
Maybe next year?
Too shy to tell.

GOONERS: Bobby, Joanne, Kate, Larry, Laurie D., Mary, Matt, M.B., Pauline, Tricia: You guys are the best friends anyone could ask for. I will never forget all the special times we've shared together. I'm really going to miss you next year. I love you guys. Laurie

Bobby: You're the best boyfriend there is. You've made my years up at UConn the best they could be. We've shared so many things in the past and I know the future will hold many more wonderful times. I LOVE YOU. LOVE, LAURIE

LAURIE (BELDEN 5TH): HAPPY GRADUATION! Next semester is going to be awfully sad without you. I'm going to miss you dearly. I think you already know how much I love you, but just in case you don't, I'll remind you. Good luck with your future. I know you're gong to be a great success and I hope I'm a part of it! I love you. Bobby

To the MUD MONSTER of BUCKLEY: A hug any other time than Saturday afternoon would have been great! Love from the two girls crossing the street.

Notable Quotables come back to haunt the famous

Daily Campus Staff

People sometimes say silly things and, occasionally, profound things without trying. The Notable Quotables are a salute to those people. Following are the noteworthy quotes from the pages of The Daily Campus this semester.

The What Happens Next Award

"Oh, they're all gone, but there's more to come."

Trish Agro, on a temporary shortage of free condoms at UConndom day

The Exactly What Did You Have To Do For That Donation Award

"I went to his home in Florida and spent an evening with him."

John Casteen, on $1 million donation to the sports center

The Premature Ejaculation Award

Michael Helfgott, on Mansfield Planning and Zoning approval of ConnTech's Celeron Square housing project

The I Hang Around With Mike Helfgott Award

"It's all happening so fast."

Carol Wiggins, vice president for student affairs and services, on the resignation of Artie Travis as coordinator of the Afro-American Cultural Center

The Where's The Beef Award

"We lost all the meat."

Steven Fletcher, organizer of the Nuclear Weapons Free Zone proposal after the Undergraduate Student Government gutted the plan

The Well, Then Stop Towing So Many Cars Award

"We've had people out there mistake us for motor vehicle inspectors."

UConn police Sgt. Alain Ferriere, on a new design for the department's uniform arm patch

The Yeah, Sure, We Believe You Award

"When it's crowded, we let one in when one's out. And, of course, we have to check everyone's ID."

Mike Boland, a bouncer at Ted's Restaurant

The Stop Watching TV Award

Tim Classey about whether condom ads should be shown on television

The We Trust Our Fellow Students Award

"The clubs will blow every dollar they get from budget and finance."

Steve Protter on the rejection of a fee increase by the Undergraduate Student Government

"Students have a short memory; they don't remember this kind of stuff."

Lynn LaMonica, on the same fee increase

The I Date Frankenstein Award

"Like a bad blind date that keeps calling up."

The Cheap Date Award

"When I take a shower tomorrow they are going to wash me. Not bad...two bucks for two girls."

John Lancia, on the Jungle's "Husky for Hire" fundraiser

The House Of Ill-Repute Award

"Primarily we are selling access to our faculty."

Michael Helfgott, discussing the impact of a proposed prison at the Mansfield Training School on ConnTech

The Near Drug Experience Award

"My hands were getting bigger. The walls around me were groaning and moving."

Barbara Harris, a near-death experience researcher about her own near-death experience

The More Cookies Award

"You simply can't double the recipe and double the quality of food."

Andrew Canon, a dorm steward, shortly before the university took over control of student-run dining halls

The If We Hear The Phrase 'User-Friendly' One More Time We're Going To Vomit Award

together, but it wasn't luck that it was well written. (Sundance is Robert Redford's film studies facility in Utah). I think a script like that would have been made in any circumstance, but it could easily have been made by someone who wanted to change it beyond recognition... make it like... 'Blind Date'."

D.C.: "Was it easy to land Martin Scorsese as director?"

G.D.: "Only that he wanted to do it because he liked the script, and Amy had been in 'Mean Streets' which he directed. It was easy to get to him for us, because we share the same attorney."

D.C.: "The film, 'Almost You', what does that title mean?"

G.D.: "It referred to this guy who wasn't a fully developed human being."

D.C.: "A jerk."

G.D.: "Well you can call him a jerk if you want... you tell me then."

D.C.: "I didn't like him, but it doesn't matter what I think of the guy."

G.D.: "People are always coming down on that. He was just a weak undeveloped person. People talk about him as if he was some sort of a war criminal. It's just about a guy who thinks he's missing out on something. He's almost got a life."

D.C.: "You're talking about this as if you've taken a lot of shit for your portrayal as well as the movie itself."

G.D.: "People did not like the movie and they did not like me. I didn't play him for like; I certainly related to him though. I wasn't acting a popularity contest: I realized how pathetic he was, it wasn't like a surprise to me."

G.D.: "I grew up in L.A. We were a very tight family... still are. I don't know, it seemed very good at the time. It's hard for me to characterize. It was typical."

I naively assume that being the son of author Dominick Dunne must have been a plus for an aspiring actor/producer.

D.C.: "Did being Griffin Dunne give you an edge in this business?"

G.D.: "It didn't quite work that way. When I was nineteen my father lived in Oregon — in a cabin — where he taught himself how to write. I was living here I was a nobody he was living there, he was a nobody, so we couldn't really help each other."

D.C.: "I hear you had a little trouble in Prep school"

G.D.: "I went to a boarding school in Colorado, and was kicked out for smoking a joint."

D.C.: "One joint?"

G.D.: "Yeah, it was a different deal then."

D.C.: "You studied acting at Neighborhood Playhouse here in New York City, but didn't get asked back for the second year?"

G.D.: "I didn't get asked back because of my attendance. There was a particular class called acoustics or something, that I've never really understood in theory, or what I was doing there... so that's usually when I had my lunch. They take an inventory of all the hours you miss as proposed to the work you've done , and I was a little over on the hours."

D.C.: "Are there any particular directors you'd like to work with?"

G.D.: "There's a shortage of good directors, well maybe there is a shortgage of good directors, but there definitely are enough around that I'd like to work with. Even a writer/director who wrote a brilliant script and thinks he's the only one who can direct it, I'd believe him. The hardest thing is finding a really good script. They're in greater demand than there are directors or actors to put them on. Being an actor is particularly frustrating because there is just no end to how many incredible actors there are who nobody knows about because they never get words in their mouths that are in any way interesting.

D.C.: "How do you and Amy get your scripts?"

G.D.: "In most cases we come up with the idea and develop it. Sometimes someone else will come to us with an idea that we think is really terrific. We listen to people who come in and tell us stories, or we'll read a book and want to develop it. We keep lists of the writers that we like."

D.C.: "How do you spend your time when you're not working? Then again, you're always working."

G.D.: "Yeah, I've been working maybe a little too much lately. I try not to hang around here on the weekends. I like to travel... just got back from Bangkok and Singapore."

Considering this interviewer wanted to give Griffin something for his time, and cash wasn't right up there with one of my choices, I thought I'd check out his musical taste and make him a tape. Luckily the man has great taste and I didn't have to go out and buy any albums.

G.D.: "I happen to actually to agree for the first time with the Grammy choice of 'Graceland' for best album. I think there was some very good music that came out this year... Steve Winwood, Peter Gabriel. I'm not totally sold on a lot of the newer bands; I mean my taste tends to run old fart. I like the ones who have stuck around the longest. My ultimate hero of music is Van Morrison. My taste really hasn't changed in 15 years. I don't know if it's going to take these people to just die of old age for my taste to change or what."

Nigerian and Haitian exhibit at Atrium

The Nigerian and Haitian Studio Photography and Artifacts exhibit, "Feed Your Eyes" will be on display until May 15 at the Atrium Gallery.

By Marilyn H. Houlberg
Special to The Daily Campus

"Feed Your Eyes" is a common inscription in the photographic albums of the Yoruba of western Nigeria. It is followed by the admonition "but please, no careless talk." This statement shows how much of our lives is reflected in what we decide to photograph or have photographed for us by others. What we select to freeze in the form of an image from the continuum of our lives reveals how we wish to be seen and what we value.

Although photography was introduced to the African continent within months of its invention in France in1839 and into Haiti at probably about the same time, not very much has been written about African and Caribbean studio photography. One exception is the pioneering work of Stephen S. Sprague, to whom this exhibition is dedicated in memorium. Three other important influences shape the concept behind this exhibition: Sol Worth, Jay Ruby, and Jean Rouch. They, along with Sprague, have stressed the importance of studying the particular ways in which cultures document themselves.

The traditional, Western-oriented history of photography appears to have a few missing chapters. A glimpse into those yet to be written chapters may be provided by this exhibition of Nigerian and Haitian studio photography. It was decided to exhibit the two traditions together as they share some common characteristics, while differing in others. Both have a strong frontal, formal syle of posing that extends in time from the 19th C. to the present. Both have more modern syles of posing that have been adopted by the young. Both have an interest in manipulated images, such as combination and multiple printing. Both have a tradition of painted or cloth backgrounds and of strong recent influences of popular culture and the mass media. Even though Nigerian and Haitian photography share striking similarities, it is not meant to imply that they are alone in these shared characteristics. Many of these relate to Western photography as well, although at different points in time. They also relate to many other lesser known traditions of photography in other parts of the world. The ultimate goal is to expand this study to include other parts of Africa and the Caribbean. This, together with recent studies in 19th and 20th C. black American photography, could begin to move toward a history of black photography in Africa and the New World.

Photograph of young boys in their Mardi Gras costumes . This exhibit can be seen at Atrium Gallery until May 15.

One interesting aspect of African photography is the unusual function of photography in respect to art and ritual related to Yoruba twins. The Yoruba, who number about 12 million, are the dominant ethnic group in southwestern Nigeria and are considered by many to be the most prolific sculptors of Africa. They are noted for having the highest recorded twinning rate in the world and also for producing ere ibeji, small wood images in human form representing deceased twins. These sculptures are carved when twins die, since twins are considered to be deities and require ritual attention both while they are alive and after their death. The images serve as surrogates for the dead twins. They are washed, dressed, and ritually fed as the living twins would have been.

According to Yoruba belief, if twins, whether living or dead, are not properly worshipped they can cause sickness and death to family members and barrenness to the mother. If they are honored., they are believed to bring good luck and wealth. Some Yoruba parents of twins who are Muslims or Christians have found a new way to get around the official proscription against "graven images." For at least the past twenty years, it has been the custom in one large northern Yoruba town to use photographs instead of wood carvings to represent their deceased twins. If the twins are of the same sex and one dies, the surviving twin is taken to the local photo studio and is photographed. The image is double printed so as to simulate the twins sitting together as they would have in life. This image is then framed under glass, placed on the family shrine, and given the necessary food offering. If the twins are not of the same sex, and one dies, the survivor is first photographed as him or herself, then dressed in the clothes of the opposite sex and photographed again. The photographer then prints the two negatives side by side, blurring the common border between the two so it looks like the twins have been photographed together. The same is also done in the case of triplets. One of the examples in the exhibition depicts a female surviving triplet first photographed as herself, then in male dress and multiple printed, so it looks as if she is siitting on a bench flanked by her two deceased triplet brothers.

...photography reflects history of people

In Haiti, the history of Port-au-Prince photo studios begins with the MEVS Studio, established prior to the 1890's. Mevs posed clients in front of hand painted backdrops featuring architectural illusions. His clientele was mainly the upper class Haitian elite. Another highly regarded studio with a tradition of black and white portraiture is Abraham Photo Studio, established in 1922 by Andre Abraham. Under photographers Jacque Augustin and Roger Francoise, Abraham Photo is still producing excellent, classic formal portraits against plain backgrounds. When asked whether or not color photography was encroaching on their business, senior photographer Augustin replied, "No. Black and white is more artistic than color."

More modern photo studios in Port-au-Prince like Gamma, Casimir, Minerve, and Ginou specialize in color photography although they also do a variety of work in black and white with some hand coloring. They are also noted for their creative double printing and manipulated images.

Just like their Nigerian counterparts, they can multiple print their clients so they seem to be appearing on television. They also multiple print their clients on the center of images of electric fans. In both Nigeria and Haiti, fans are prestige items, highly desirable in tropical climates. It is thus to be expected that this type of photography appears in both places. Other types of manipulated images include photographs depicting a cameo photo of a person's beloved printed over their heart. If the client is only thinking about or missing the presence of the beloved, the client is posed in a contemplative side view and the image of the beloved is superimposed on the temple of the client. Another type of manipulated image shows mothers balancing their children on outstretched hands. If a woman wants to show her triumph in love, she can first be photographed with an outstretched hand. Then the photographer will double print the man of her choice — in the palm of her hand.

Haitian photo studios provide a variety of backdrops. Some have painted Haitian scenes — usually including palm trees and traditional thatched huts. Others use printed fabrics with themes related to the modern mass media. Clients can select to be photographed in front of the Battlestar Galactica, Superman, or the Dukes of Hazard, among others. At Casimir Photo, clients can opt to be superimposed on American $100 bills. Modern photo studios reflect American influence on popular culture among the younger Haitians.

Children are a most common subject for Haitian studio photographers. They are brought in for photographs to commemorate their birthdays, their first communion in the Catholic Church, and their annuaal Mardi Gras or Carnival costumes. Examples of all three categories are part of the exhibition.

A popular theme in Port-au-Prince photo studios is to be photographed as if enclosed in a bottle or jar. This seems to mainly appeal to women, although it also includes babies being photographed as if inside baby bottles. This theme is missing in Yoruba photography and it poses the question of why this theme is so widespread and popular in Haiti. It is possbile that it relates to the voodoo religious tradition in which many different types of bottles and jars are said to contain the souls of both the living and the dead as well as contain the spirits of the various loa or gods. Aspects of the soul are protected by being put into these containers. A popular type of voodoo bottle featues plastic dolls put inside transparent bottles. Haitian interpretations of this phenomenon, of women photographed as if in bottles or jars, is that women give these photographs to their boyfriends as a sign that they have been "captured" by them, as if in a bottle. Their relationship is safe and secure. By extension, the babies in the baby bottles can perhaps be viewed as a way of securing and protecting the child in this world. In a more general sense, it also celebrates the essence of babyhood.

Both Nigerian and Haitian photography are flourishing but perhaps ready to move into the next phase which is video. Some Nigerian photo studios have added signs that say, "Now I have Video." They videotape funerals, chieftaincy installations and other celebrations.

That Nigeria and Haiti will use the medium of video as creatively and often ingeniously as they have used photography seems certain. Now instead of double printing their clients to make it appear that they are on television, they can actually put them on television. Another chapter in how cultures document themselves is about to be written, or rather more precisely, electronically stored. The cultural dialogue continues as we approach the 21st century with a host of new technologies on the horizon.

Sports year characterized by change, continuity

By Joe Erwin
Daily Campus Staff

In the 1986-87 UConn sports year, some things changed — such as the football team rolling up an 8-3 record and sharing the Yankee Conference title — and some things never change — like the women's tennis team having its 25th and 26th consecutive .500 or better seasons under coach Pat Babcock.

Other things again failed to get started, like the fabled sports center, which had a site dedication, a million-dollar donation from alumnus Harry Gampel, who will get the arena named after him if it's ever built, but no ground-breaking.

A UConn institution, Athletic Director John Toner, was reassigned, with a search committee presently searching for a replacement.

Toner will still be around supervising construction of the sports center, but gymnastics at UConn is officially dead and buried.

The fall sports season turned out to be a big success for UConn, with much of the excitement coming from an unexpected source — the football team.

The Huskies were flat in opening with a win over Central Connecticut but then looked impressive in defeating Richmond and Yale. Consecutive losses followed at New Hampshire and Delaware State, but the Huskies regrouped to win five of their last six games.

UConn went into its last two games knowing it needed to win both to have a shot at a National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I-AA playoffs.

The Huskies beat Rhode Island in overtime, and then, in one of the the most exciting games in UConn history, drove 80 yards in the final posession to beat UMass 20-17.

UConn came through. The NCAA didn't. The Huskies were next in line for a bid when the NCAA field of 16 was filled.

The tournament disappointment didn't obscure the outstanding individual and team performances.

Coach Tom Jackson was named coach-of-the-year by both the Yankee Conference and New England Sports Network.

Offensive tackle Pat Anglim was named First-Team All-Yankee Conference and All-New England by the Associated Press and United Press International. Place kicker Mark Carter was named to the conference first team, while defensive back Scott Daniels, middle guard Nate Cotton and linebacker Mike Jansen were chosen to the YC second team.

Many people were surprised when the football team didn't get an NCAA bid, but more were surprised when the men's soccer team was left out of the field. For the first time since 1977 and only the second time in 14 years, the Huskies were spectators at tournament time.

It was a five-game losing streak early in the season which did the Huskies in. UConn went 10-2-2 in its last 14 games, outscoring the opposition 27-10, but it wasn't enough to sway the selection committee.

Sophomore Dan Donigan capped an outstanding season by being named a National Soccer Coaches Association All-America. Donigan became only the third UConn sophomore to be named All-America and he was a first team All-New England selection, on the Big East Tournament team and was the most valuable player of the New England All-Star game.

Junior Chris Reif was selected second-team All-New England while Steve Rammel was named the Big East Northern Division Co-Freshman of the Year.

Meanwhile, the women's soccer team did advance to the NCAA tournament and made it to the Final Eight before being knocked out by UMass.

The Huskies lost a 1-0, double-overtime, penalty kick game to UMass, a game which prevented UConn from going to the Final Four for the fourth time.

The Huskies still had a fine season, going 15-5-1 and notching their eighth straight post-season appearence.

Senior Linda Jackson was named one of Soccer magazine's 11 "National MVPs," and was also chosen first-team All-Northeast and All-New England.

Freshman Kim Prutting earned first-team All-New England and second-team All-Northeast selections, while senior Shelley McElroy was a second-team All-Northeast and All-New England pick, and sophomore Maureen O'Connor was second-team All-Northeast.

On the same day the women's soccer season ended, the field hockey season also concluded. It was a somewhat premature ending, as it was the first time since 1981 that UConn failed to advance to the Final Four.

The Huskies' dream of defending their 1985 national championship ended when New Hampshire beat them 2-1.

The loss couldn't obscure another fine season for the Huskies, as UConn went 13-4-3 and was ranked fourth in the country in the final NCAA poll.

Junior Tracey Fuchs was second nationally in goals scored with 30 and goals per game with 1.51. She was rewarded twice, being one of only three Division I players to repeat as a first-team All-America. In addition, last week she was chosen to the United States national team, with a chance to compete in the 1988 Olympics.

Freshman Andy Ball was UConn's top finisher in the Big East, at 13th place.

The volleyball team, under first-year head coach Linda Gottleib, went 10-25 on the season. Of the 14 UConn players, 10 were freshmen, including hitter Mary Amiccuci, who was selected Big East Northern Division Freshman of the Year.

GENERAL

YO MOL-STAIN: YOU'RE JUST NOT DOING IT FOR US ANYMORE. LATER DAYS. Oooops, did we break your heart? Again? At least you know you have two friends. Have a dried-up summer in P-town. We'll miss ya! — You're amazing, incredible, hilarious and ultimately cool roommates. (Your idols.)

Joey: I'm not tall, well-end...(you know), long-legged, or any other quality you desire, but HEY...I'm what you're stuck with!!! Thanx for not giving up on me on Saturday. Just think, June will be the beginning to a very different way of life...Good Luck on finals...Love you.

To one of the most respectable girls at UConn: Well... another year, another dollar and a half (so they say). To tell you the truth, right now I'm too tired to wrap up this year so all I'm going to say is THANK YOU for all you do (this Bud's for you)! Without a Bumble I don't think there would be a Bee (at least at UConn). G'night! Ignorant Slut #1

Dearest Mary Margaret — OH FIFI!!! What can I say once again? It seems we have new memories each and every day at UConn. You've been the best friend this past year and I just wanted to say thanks so much for everything — especially for falling on me over the fence! Oh my god, there are just too many fun times to write about — perhaps when we finally graduate (HA, HA!). Remember, when in doubt — WITHDRAW! Thanks for all your help during all of my pre-midlife crises... Would you please get a date by the way?! How many pennies must I throw? Perhaps it's time for a rendez-vous with Chunkster the Youngster?? I don't know. My grandfather is interested though!! Well, I'll cut it short (the way you like it) — Just remember, who loves ya' baby?
Get psyched for the banquet and REVENGE...
Daily Campus love and mine,
Cindy
P.S. Your father should have pulled out!!!

AMES: Thanx for all the good times. Have a good life. The Hookups — R & J.

Doug from Kappa Sig — Congratulations on graduation!! Good luck with finding a job, hopefully you'll get something that pays a little more than your previous summer job! Looking forward to Thumper's Saturday night, or have you forgotten already? Try not to drink so much, huh?
Keep in touch...

...Calhoun takes over men's basketball team

As the winter season began, attention turned to the men's basketball team, where Jim Calhoun began his first season as head coach. The Huskies began the season with just eight scholarship players.

UConn had a bumpy road ahead of itself, literally, when the team bus crashed Dec. 9 on the way to a game at Boston University. The Huskies' odyssey continued that night as UConn was deprived of a basket by a student scorer, who left in tears when she was questioned and the two teams got into a fight.

The fight was a draw, the Huskies lost the argument and the game, but all in all, were lucky on the night, because nobody was injured in the crash.

It didn't get any easier in January when sophomores Phil Gamble and Cliff Robinson were declared academically ineligible. UConn was nearly always outmanned, but rarely outfought.

The Huskies finished 9-19, but help is on the way, as five talented recruits will join UConn next season, with Gamble and Robinson trying to regain their eligibilty.

As Calhoun said after the Huskies' final game, a 61-59 loss to Boston College, "I told them [the players] I'm very happy to be coaching in Storrs, Connecticut. I'm not pleased with 19 losses. That's not going to happen again."

Your First.... and Last Chance!

It's your FIRST chance because it's the first time the Co-op has used the receipt turn-in method for distributing patronage rebates.

Don't forget to submit your receipts any time on or before June 30th. Convenient envelopes are available at all Co-op locations.

It's your LAST CHANCE because after this year you'll no longer have to submit the receipts to get your rebate. All Co-op purchases by members will still be eligible for rebate, we'll just keep track of the information for you. At the end of the year, your patronage rebate check will be automatically printed.

We suggest that you continue to save your receipts. They're required for returns and they will allow you to verify the purchase information we have for patronage rebates.

INSIGHT INTO EYESIGHT
Dr. Leo Santucci

EYE COORDINATION

When your eyes are working the way they should be, they're both looking directly at an object with the same intensity and precision. If this is not the case, then there may be a problem in the muscles of one or both eyes.

Each eye has six muscles that control movement and position. They must be in good working condition to give you proper eye coordination. If there's a weakness or defect in any one of these muscles, your eyes are not getting the help they need to see well.

Your vision won't be as clear as it should be. You'll probably be putting extra strain on the weak muscles to try to bring them into line. This can cause headaches, fatigue, and sometimes double vision. It also affects your depth perception - your ability to judge the distance of objects.

To be in good health, you should be able to control all of your muscle movements, including the muscles of your eyes. If you've noticed any weakness in your vision, it's time to have an eye examination.

Personals

Congratulations to the recently appointed 1987-88 UConn Cheerleading squad. It's great that all the returning members made the squad again, and I think the new recruits will be great additions. I witnessed your tryouts, and I'm aware of all the practicing, and many of the pressures you all experience, but I am sure most of your peers are not aware of the "mega" time and effort that goes into earning and maintaining such a position. You are very deserving of everyone's congratulations and support. You are great representatives of the University, keep up the good work! Let's hope you get to travel to Hawaii next basketball season, as well as the football playoffs, instead of getting stranded in a blizzard on the New Jersey Turnpike. Good luck on your finals, and we'll see you next year, if not before; From: You know who!

Dearest Peter,
This year has been so much fun and I'm glad we've become so close. You're a very special person (even though you don't change your clothes every day and I could cut my hand on your face!). I'm looking forward to this summer, but first the banquet – YOU GUYS ARE DEAD!!!
I don't know whether to congratulate you on graduation or not. When will you let me in on the secret? I'll let you in on what M.O. means...
Anyway, next year should prove to be interesting, although it won't be the same without you.
Good luck at McDonald's and we'll stop in for some of those nutritious chicken McNuggets occasionally. Remember the key word is – BREATHE!!
Thanks again for all of your help this year.
Love always,
Cindy

NEW YORK — The UConn crew team wrapped up its season season triumpahntly Saturday at the Metropolitan regatta.

The women's eight boat swept through the season undefeated, as they won their 2,000-meter heat and won the finals in that race over Lafayette, Canisius, Skidmore, Fordham, Iona and Manhattan.

The women look forward ton another successful year next year as freshmen Kathy Fitzpatrick, Debi Holcomb, and coxswain Matt Northrop, sophomores Sue Menard, Sue Strumski and Lydia Ugianskis and juniors Elyse Staats, Nancy Andrews and Patti Szoch will also return.

The men's heavyweight four boat finished third, with the unit of coxswain Maureen Madden and rowers Craig Slautcheff, Mark Palmer, John Leonard and Stan Budarz topped Skidmore, Canisius, Marist, Stockton, Iona and Albany colleges.

The men's eight boat finished third in its first heat but in the finals, the boat, which consisted of coxswain Gilda Allibal, Jon Pollock, Bill Avery, Phil Surrato, Paul Roucant, Chris Donahue Steve Barber, Tom Makris and Steve Hill finished fifth.

The men's light weight took second place with Elyse Staats replacing Chris Dlugolecki, to team with coxswain Sara Turano and rowers Mark Stadtmeuller, Ed Crockford and Jeff Murray.

The crew club has competed for three semesters with just two used shells and a volutneer coach Ken Donnelly. The club is pleased with this year's performance and looking advance financially to upgrade equipment and accomodate a larger portion of the student population.

The picture was brighter in women's basketball, as second-year coach Geno Auriemma's team finished 14-13, and 9-7, a school best, in the Big East Conference.

Kris Lamb, a 5-foot-11 guard/forward, was voted the Big East Freshman of the Year in the pre-season poll and, after averaging 13 points and 6.2 rebounds per game, was also given that honor in the post-season poll.

This week, Lamb was chosen to respresent the East team in the U.S. Olympic Sports Festival, and she hopes to compete in the Olympics.

In hockey, coach Ben Kirtland took his team to the playoffs for the third consecutive year, and once again UConn went down to the wire before clinching.

UConn needed a win over American International in its final ECAC game of the season to qualify, and Paul Belliveau scored with 4:34 to play in the game to give the Huskies a 4-3 win.

Senior Harry Geary established school records for most goals, assists and points in a season. Senior Todd Krygier, who had 24 goals and 24 assists, was named to the American Hockey Coaches' Association Title All-America team.

The swim teams, both coached by Peter McDevitt, went a combined 15-15, as the men's team went 7-8 and the women finished 8-7. The women finished eighth in the Big East and fourth at the ECAC championships while the men were sixth at the Big East and 12th in the New England Championships.

The men's track team went 9-0 in the winter season, and the Huskies had several outstanding performaces.

The UConn relay team of Bill Oliverson, Mike Christie, Floyd Redfield and Rohan Freeman won the mile at the prestigious Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden. At the Big East Championships, UConn finished fourth but Christie was awarded the men's Most Outstanding Performance of the meet, winning the triple jump with a UConn record 15.94 meters.

The women's track team won its only dual meet, 82-39 over Boston College, and won the Connecticut Intercollegiate Championships.

As spring came, the baseball team, which went 2-7 in its southern trip, came up north and started pounding the ball. The question coming into this season was pitching, but coach Andy Baylock has handled his staff well, starting the season using four and five pitchers a game.

The Huskies have had three pitchers, Dave Fradkin, Stew Strong and Charles Nagy win the Big East pitcher of the week consecutively. UConn cliched second place in the conference's Northern Division Saturday and will play in the Big East Tournament next Thursday through Sunday at Muzzy Field in Bristol.

Pitcher Denise Hannon, who missed all of last season due to an injury, has come back to go 15-2 this season and lead the softball team to a 26-6-1 record.

UConn is ranked second in the Northeast region behind Adelphi, and the two teams will play a doubleheader at Storrs Saturday with a possible NCAA tournament berth on the line.

The women's tennis team (to nobody's surprise), went 4-0 this spring, raising Babcock's career record to 159-64-1. Dena Cocozza went 8-0 in No. 1 singles while Lee Yniquez was 4-0 in No. 4 and No. 5 singles.

The men's team wrapped up its season Monday with a win over Holy Cross to finish the season at 6-7.

The golf team finished 1-4 on the spring, but coach Joe Giannelli's team rallied on the second day of competition to move from eighth to fourth place in the 12-team New England Division I Championship. Tim Heany led UConn with a 152, tying for fourth place overall.

Injuries beset both track teams at the Big East Outdoor Championships.

The women's team finished sixth, and will conclude its season this weekend when Mary Kennen, MaryPat Murphy and Dory Raterman will compete in the ECAC Championships.

The men's team finished eighth in the Big East, with pole vaulter Daron Armstrong being UConn's lone winner. The Huskies conclude their season this weekend at the New England Championships,

If there was one word to describe UConn sports in 1986-87, it was "interesting." The team with the poorest won-loss record, men's basketball, had enough trials and tribulations for a prime-time soap opera.

Now, it appears as though the team is on the way up. Combine this with the improvement shown in football and women's basketball, the consistency of hockey, and the traditionally strong programs in field hockey, men's and women's soccer, men's track and the rest of the varsity sports, and the picture looks just as interesting in 1987-88.
